ENGLAND'S COMMERCIAL JEALOUSY

She Looks With Great Interest Upon the Coming International Congress—A Peruvian View of the Matter

BOSTON, Oct 6.—The delegates to the International American congress, after a comfortable night's rest and a hearty breakfast, were ready for another day of sight seeing. Carriages bearing the party were driven through the city and down to the dock where they were met by the mayor and a committee of the board of aldermen and escorted aboard a steamboat, which landed them at Deer Island. At this place are located the correctional institutions of the city which the delegates inspected. In the chapel of the reform school a pretty ceremonial took place. About 300 of the boys all uniformed in blue and wearing white gloves marched with military precision and greatly interested the visitors with singing and other exercises, while a band filled in the intervals with music.

At the close of the exercises luncheon was served in the dining room. When the coffee was reached brief remarks were made by several delegates and officials. When the speeches were concluded the party returned to Boston. In the afternoon a procession of landaus stretching half a mile in length carried the excursionists out of Boston and about Cambridge and past all the buildings of Howard university. The drive was on through clustered villages that constitute Boston's suburbs past Longfellow's home with Brookline district as the objective point. At dusk the party alighted at the home of John L Gardner, a director of the Chicago Burlington & Quincy Railroad company and after a brief reception returned to the city.

ENGLAND'S COMMERCIAL JEALOUSY.

A Prediction That Little Good Will Come of the International Congress.

LONDON, Oct 6.—The Times of this city has been devoting considerable space to the congress of American nations which convenes in Washington this week. Editorially this journal now says: "It is just cause for pride that in the capital of the United States this week will meet representatives of all the American republics great and small.

Common institutions with histories in many ways alike, awaken sympathy. There is dramatic fitness in the fact that the sons of Bolivar and Miranda should visit the shrine of Washington. We do not grudge the secretary of state the satisfaction of feeling that it has fallen to him to bring about this meeting. He may justly believe he has thereby increased his country's legitimate and predestined influence over the southern continent, but to that influence time and the course of events have put strict limits, and he must see as we do that the international congress can do but little to divert the current of commerce determined by those true trade winds, the interest of mankind.

Few parts of the world lie for most purposes so far apart as the United States and the communities of South America. Distance in miles is always the true measure of moral propinquity. Hitherto there has been strange ignorance of countries intended one would say, not merely from looking at the map but from their history, to be familiar with each other. For most practical purposes connection between Rio and Buenos Ayres and London is really far closer than that between those capitals and New York. English capital nourishes enterprises on the banks of the Platte river. Of our bankers these communities borrow and on the stock exchange and on continental bourses their securities are chiefly dealt in. They prefer English to American goods. Common ignorance of North and South America is admitted by those who promoted the congress and it will help to make a breach in this wall of separation.

It is agreed that purely political questions will be avoided, not that there is any danger or dread of trouble. There may be harmless, unexciting talk about arbitration, common silver coin and the extradition of criminals. We shall hear much of Panama and Nicaragua canal routes, but discussions must turn chiefly on fiscal matters. Indeed the only clearly expressed hope about the congress is that it will promote trade between these countries.

How strange, it is said, that countries geographically near should have comparatively so little intercourse. What might not be done by a few subsidized lines of steamers plying between New York and Rio, Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso? Above all what might not be accomplished by American Zollverein or the establishment of a reciprocity among American nations? This last is the chief hope expressed by Mr Blaine's friends. If the congress has any definite hope it is to establish reciprocity. The object is a captivating one—every question of reciprocity in the abstract—but giving effect to it is encompassed with difficulties. We shall be curious to see how they are dealt with by the protectionist members of General Harrison's cabinet."

A PERUVIAN EDITORIAL.

The Writer Admires Blaine and the American Nation

LIMA, Peru, Oct 6.—El Comercio, the oldest and leading daily newspaper in this city in its edition of the 4th inst has a long and enthusiastic editorial upon the International American conference. "The speech of Secretary Blaine," it says, "delivered as a welcome to the delegates, gives a new proof of his illustrious talents as a great statesman of a great people. We are satisfied that the United States have no wish to reap any harvest from the conference except such as will please the palates of its guests at this feast of continental progress." El Comercio in conclusion expresses its conviction that the Panama canal is a work of general importance adding that a railroad merely upon the isthmus will not be sufficient for the interests of Peruvian commerce.

PURCHASE OF LOWER CALIFORNIA.

Senate Committee on Irrigation Reported to Favor the Project.

WASHINGTON, Oct 6.—It is possible that congress at the coming session will consider again the purchase of the peninsula of Lower California from Mexico.

The senate committee on irrigation recently investigating the subject in California, found at the extreme south end of the state a tract of bottom land the extent of which is very great, the soil being fertile but practically worthless unless irrigated. The land could be watered at little expense, plenty of water being available near by and all that is necessary being to cut a canal to the Colorado river. However the only practical point at which this can be done is across the Mexican border. The most satisfactory way to accomplish this work would be the purchase of Lower California and it is thought that Mexico might be induced to sell as the land is of little value to her. There are many reasons urged why the purchase should be made, one being that it would have the effect of giving our Pacific coast line a natural termination just as the purchase of Florida completed the Atlantic coast line. It is thought the report of the senate committee will show the complete feasibility of irrigation and favor the acquisition of the peninsula of Lower California.

POWDERLY AT CHICAGO

He Addresses Five Thousand People on the Sunday Closing of Saloons

CHICAGO, Oct 6.—Five thousand people were present at the meeting in Central Music hall this afternoon, the feature of which was an address by Grand Master Workman Powderly of the Knights of Labor. The Sunday closing of saloons was the topic announced for discussion. Mr Powderly was greeted with a tempest of applause and his remarks on Sunday closing were emphatic and pointed enough to elicit repeated outbreaks of applause from even the most radical of his hearers. He afterward spoke of the charges to which he made so effective a reply at St Louis. He added if any Chicago people were not satisfied he was perfectly willing to have them appoint a committee of three honest men to investigate his affairs.

On the 14th inst Mr Powderly will go to Philadelphia where he will hold a conference with the chiefs of the federation of labor in regard to the manner of presenting the eight-hour question to the next general assembly.

Mr Powderly says he thinks as he always has that there should be a shorter working day than now but that it will never be brought about by strikes. To his mind arbitration is the only way. He thinks the federation is receding from its radical position on his question.

A MYSTERIOUS BEATING.

A Prominent Man Cruelly Whipped by a Saloonkeeper's Friends.

ST LOUIS, Oct 6.—Captain D. P Slattery, president of the Merchants Elevator Company and one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of St. Louis, lies at his home unconscious from the effects of a brutal beating received early this morning near the corner of Jefferson and Cass avenues.

Those implicated in the affair tell a most peculiar story. Edward Klosterman keeps a grocery and saloon at the corner named and claims at 1 o'clock this morning his wife was awakened by a noise and saw a man walking toward her bed without shoes, hat or coat. She screamed and Klosterman and his bartender came up stairs. They found a strange man on the landing. Alexander Hunt, who was also in the saloon came up after them and told Klosterman to turn the man over to him. This was done, and Hunt beat the stranger who proves to have been Captain Slattery most brutally, winding up by throwing him down stairs. They then followed him out on the street and beat him in a terrible manner there and when they had pounded him sufficiently took him to the police station where the sergeant immediately recognized him and sent for a physician, who pronounced his injuries very dangerous. All the parties concerned are under arrest.

The assailants claim that Slattery never spoke, even before Hunt began to beat him. Slattery's missing clothes were brought home this morning Klosterman claiming to have found them in the street. A diamond ring and pin valued at $1500, are missing. The affair has created intense excitement.

THE VICTIM'S STATEMENT

ST LOUIS, Oct 6.—Late to-night Captain Slattery recovered consciousness. He claimed that he was on his way to see a former employe who lives on Cass avenue when he was struck on the head and then knew no more.

THE CLAN-NA-GAEL.

Call for a Convention Issued by the Cronin Faction

PHILADELPHIA, Oct 6.—Four members of the executive committee of the Clan na Gael who represent the Cronin faction as opposed to the nationalist faction have issued a circular for a convention of all camps throughout the country. The call is signed by Luke A Dillon and O'Meagher Condon of this city, James Tierney of New York and Mortimer Scanlan of Chicago. There are nine members of the executive committee five of whom are nationalists who therefore have control. These five have come out in a counter circular forbidding the camps to send delegates to the proposed convention as the call, they allege, is unauthorized and illegal.

The purpose of the convention called by Dillon, Conlon, Scanlan and Tierney is stated to be for the purpose of reuniting the order. The circular calls for one delegate from each camp, and blanks are enclosed for filling in the name of the delegate and alternate elected which are to be forwarded as well as other communications to E Kemper, box 568, Philadelphia. It is claimed the name of Kemper is not the real name of any one connected with the movement but is assumed. The circular goes on to say upon receipt of these names and credentials passwords and time of the convention will be sent in return. Luke Dillon has been designated as the presiding officer.

SUFFERING AT JOHNSTOWN

The Cold Blasts of Winter Begin To Be Felt—Many Deaths

JOHNSTOWN, Pa, Oct 6.—With the thermometer about the freezing point there is a great deal of suffering here these nights by people who are improperly sheltered and poorly clothed. The relief money which was intended to supply their necessities even if paid at once, will now come too late to be properly applied for providing against the blasts of winter. The clothing that was on hand when the commissary department shut down has been transferred to the Red Cross Society, by whom it will be distributed to the needy. There have been a great many deaths here within the past week and most of them have been superinduced by ailments contracted in the flood. At the Red Cross hospital there are now twenty two cases of typhoid fever, most of them strangers in town.

A FATAL FIRE.

Four Men Perish in the Flames at Winona, Miss.

WINONA, Miss., Oct 6.—A restaurant was destroyed by fire here early this morning. Nine men were asleep in the upper story and four of them perished. They were J A Thomas, a merchant of Cumberland, J L Lathry and Tom Crutch, of Popenlander and Paul Williams of Sun Creek. All were prominent citizens of their respective communities, and were en route home from Memphis where they went to purchase goods. Jena Kent, of Carroll county, A J Cook and W L Alford of Webster county, escaped from a second story window and were badly bruised, Cook sustaining a fracture of the ankle. The flames were well under headway before discovered, and by the time that sufficient help arrived the walls had fallen in.

A BIG STORM AT SEA.

The German Steamer Aller Experiences Very Heavy Weather

NEW YORK, Oct 6.—The North German Lloyd steamer Aller, which arrived yesterday a day overdue reports having had a terribly rough time soon after leaving Bremerhaven. An extremely heavy storm came up and huge waves dashed onto and over the steamer for hours. She was delayed fourteen hours by the storm. When the seas had gone down and the wind stopped blowing the captain ordered an inspection of the steamship. One lifeboat, one of the largest and strongest on the starboard side had gone over the davits and all three of the other boats were started. The greater part of the Aller's starboard railing was carried away.

FROM MEXICO

A Vigorous Campaign Begun Against the Yaqui Indians

CITY OF MEXICO, Oct 6.—The Twenty fourth infantry left to-day by rail to Sonora to take part in the Yaqui campaign. More troops will follow and earnest work be then begun. General Cervantes, department commander of Sonora, arrived to-day. He states that the situation is dangerous. General Diaz informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that the campaign against the Indians in Yucatan would be prosecuted vigorously next season and the lands there would be opened up to settlement.

Considerable damage was done in Vera Cruz harbor by the recent storm.

RAILROAD PROTECTIVE UNION

It Favors Short Hours and the Employment Only of Experienced Men.

BOSTON, Oct 6.—A secret meeting of the Steam Railroad Men's Protective Union held in this city to-day with [illegible] delegates present from all parts of the United States and Canada. Committees were appointed to draft resolutions regarding questions of railroads employing inexperienced men and minors, shorter hours for employes and the adoption of safety appliances. It was decided to support the Pinkerton bill. The federation question was thoroughly explained by the president and it was decided to enter the federation.

MILLE LACS RESERVATION.

An Indian Treaty Adds 4,000 000 Acres to the Public Domain.

BRAINERD, Minn., Oct 6.—Word has been received here to-day from the Indian commissioners at Mille Lacs reservation that those Indians have at last given in and signed a treaty which will open some of the richest lands in the country to settlement. The result of the commission's labors adds about 4,000 000 acres to the public domain additional to that secured by the Sioux commission.

A Collision in New York Harbor

NEW YORK, Oct 6.—Captain John H Matthews, of the tug [illegible], has sent to the local board of steamboat inspectors a report of a collision between two scows and a schooner which happened on Thursday. The two scows and the schooner were sunk. The tug had the two scows in tow. It was about dusk when the schooner bore down upon them. The tug blew a warning whistle, but no one was seen at the schooner's wheel. She struck the first scow and sunk it, receiving a bad gash in her bow. Immediately after, she struck the second scow and sunk it. This was too much for her and the schooner sank in a couple of minutes. Just before she went down two of her crew appeared on deck and were rescued. The name of the schooner is not given in the report and it is not known how many people perished.

Criminal Charge Preferred.

CHICAGO, Oct 6.—Thomas D Twombley master mechanic of the Chicago Rock Island & Pacific railroad was placed under arrest late Saturday night on a warrant issued by the coroner, charged with reappointing his drunken son to take charge of the engine that caused the loss of seven lives in the recent suburban train disaster at Englewood. Mr Twombley spent Saturday night and Sunday in the police station.

Clan na Gael Guardians Fail to Meet.

CHICAGO, Oct 6.—A meeting of the senior and junior guardians of Clan na Gael camp in district [illegible] announced to be held this afternoon did not materialize. Less than a dozen men altogether were present and an adjournment was had without anything accomplished. The idea that the gathering was to have been a regular district convention appears to have been unfounded.

ELECTIONS IN FRANCE

The Re-Balloting Shows Large Republican Gains.

BOULANGER'S FRIENDS DESERT HIM

He Is Charged With a Misappropriation of Political Funds—Bismarck Says Peace Is Now Certain.

PARIS, Oct 6.—Re ballots were taken to-day in the districts in which the recent elections were without definite result. The weather was [illegible] and a host of electors presented themselves at the polls. The followers of Boulanger are [illegible] him. M LaGuerre and other former Boulangists have ceased to mention the general's name, styling themselves only revisionists. It is estimated that two thirds of the 183 constituencies balloting to-day have gone republican. The conservatives calculated upon the return of [illegible] of their candidates in Paris. All members of the national committee will confer with Boulanger in London on Tuesday next, prior to his departure for the Isle of Jersey.

In Belleville Dumay, socialist, received [illegible] and Rochefort 4,0[illegible]4. In Bordeaux [illegible], Boulangist, has ousted Faure. In [illegible] republican has beaten the Boulangist [illegible]. Lyons has elected three republicans. [illegible] yard were animated this evening [illegible] paraded the streets shouting [illegible]. Mounted guards kept the people [illegible]. The total returns for Paris show [illegible] twenty two republicans and fourteen Boulangists. Among the former are [illegible] Dreyfus, Lanessan, Raspail and Maret. Among the Boulangists are Dr [illegible] who defeated M Basley and M Senne who defeated Minister Heredia.

Midnight.—A few arrests have been made principally of noisy youths. The streets [illegible] crowded otherwise the city is calm. The [illegible] in the provinces are very slowly. Returns from [illegible] districts show the election of 105 [illegible] and forty five anti republicans. It is reported that a split has occurred between Boulanger and [illegible] Dillon because of the former's assertion that a bargain with the conservatives had [illegible] of seats to Boulangists. Boulangists have obtained nearly one half of the representation of Paris and many anti republicans elected are pledged to a revision policy.

Returns from 1[illegible]0 districts in which reballots were taken show the election of 127 republicans and 48 anti republicans.

CHARGES AGAINST BOULANGER.

His Friends Allege a Misappropriation of Political Funds

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The second ballots which took place in 186 constituencies in France to-day excite the least possible interest in England and appear to be regarded throughout France and in Paris itself with nothing approaching the usual election excitement.

The feeling seems to become general that the republic is now firmly established for many years and whatever may be the result of to-day [illegible] France will maintain her existing form of government intact. Boulanger is no longer a factor in any French political problem.

Those who heretofore have been his firmest political friends are to-day ready to accept the explanation of the general's disastrous overthrow at the polls which is anything but creditable to their former chief. Utterly unable to comprehend that the French people should have deliberately repudiated themselves and their revolutionary schemes they now insist that their defeat [illegible] entirely to the failure of General Boulanger to use large sums of money which had been [illegible] him to aid in carrying the elections for which purpose they were intended.

It is plainly charged that the general has been quietly stowing away millions of francs which his wealthy dupes poured into his coffers [illegible] he let the elections take care of themselves. Boulanger takes pains to create the impression that he is impoverished but his disgusted [illegible] make no secret of their belief that he has carefully nursed his bank account at the expense of their own and their political prospects.

"PEACE IS CERTAIN."

These Are the Words of the Iron Chancellor of Germany

PARIS, Oct 6.—A Berlin correspondent of the Journal des Debats asserts that Prince Bismarck in receiving the president of the [illegible] congress, said: "The foreign situation is so peaceful that you may set to work without the slightest fear. It was not always so. Not [illegible] ago England still hesitated whether to act as a bull or as a fat ox chewing a cud. To-day her resolution is taken and I can assure you the maintenance of peace is certain."

CABLE NOTES.

Parnell's Conservatism.

LONDON, Oct 6.—Parnell has written to Sexton asking him to act as his representative at the convention on the opening of the new tenants' defense league in Tipperary and to lay his views before the convention. He says his health will not permit him to cross the channel. He advises that the movement be limited to defensive actions.

Suicide of an English Knight

LONDON, Oct 6.—Sir William Tindal Robertson suicided at Bridgeton to-day by [illegible]. Deceased represented Brighton in the house of commons. In politics he was a conservative. He was blind and served on the royal commission for inquiring into the condition of the blind. He took his life in a fit of insanity.

WHAT MIGHT BE EXPECTED.

The Democrats Promise to Obstruct Legislation in the Next Congress

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Congressman Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, is in the city. In conversation to-day he said that though the democrats were in the minority they were fully conscious of their power, and would use it. "We don't propose," said he, "that the republican majority shall pass a single measure without our consent. For instance, you may depend upon it that the rules will not be changed by the republican majority in any essential feature. We do not propose to permit them to be changed as is desired by Mr Reed and others in any particular feature nor will we permit any of the proposed legislation looking to the control by congress of elections, for we know very plainly what the purpose of that is. The same can be said of contested cases that will come up before congress. We do not propose to allow the republican majority to be further increased ad libitum by throwing out democratic members as seems to be the purpose. In other words, we propose to exercise control of the house just as much as though we were still in the majority, because we know our minority is strong enough to make us virtual rulers."

Train Robbers Foiled

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 6.—At 3 o'clock this morning two masked men attempted to rob an express train on the Knoxville branch of the Louisville & Nashville road. A GANG OF THIEVES UNEARTHED

King the Banner Republican County of Washington—Tacoma's City Government—Budget of San Francisco News.

SAN FRANCISCO Oct 6.—A local paper to-day prints telegrams received in this city yesterday confirming the reported sale of the Denver, Texas & Fort Worth railroad to the Union Pacific This is considered a very important transaction by railroad men here As with this road and its other connections the Union Pacific will hold the same position in regard to the Atlantic seaboard and Colorado as the Southern Pacific holds in California The latter line controls 90 per cent. of Atlantic shipments to California and now that the Union Pacific has connections with Galveston and New Orleans it hopes to gain as good a foot hold in Colorado.

Another object of the purchase is that the Union Pacific thinks that it can now haul wheat from Oregon and Washington to the Southern seaboard at Galveston and New Orleans, making a long and profitable haul and diverting trade from the clipper ships which take wheat from Puget Sound

The road just purchased is a line 803 miles long from Denver to Fort Worth and was built several years ago by General G M Dodge formerly chief engineer of the Union Pacific It is said General Dodge, Sidney Dillon and Henry Ives, the latter being the principal stockholders in Union Pacific, were sole owners of the smaller road.

A GANG OF THIEVES.

Schemes Unearthed by Which Railroad Men Robbed Shippers

SEATTLE, Oct. 6—A conspiracy was to-day unearthed through which certain employes of the Puget Sound Shore railroad and the Columbia & Puget Sound railroad have been systematically robbing consignments of goods transported over these roads and disposing of them to their own profit. Various firms about the city have for some time been complaining of their losses in clothing while in transit, and some weeks ago consignments of men's clothing to Toklas & Singerman and Kline & Rosenberg were $300 short About a week since C P Blanchard, manager for Toklas & Singerman, was passing a tailor shop and he accidentally noticed a suit of clothing belonging to one of the firm's shipments Stepping into the shop he ascertained that the suit had been left there by one Jack Gay brakeman on the road, to be refitted Officers were notified and they watched for Gay Yesterday he called after the clothing and was promptly arrested.

It was known that he was a member of a band of conspirators, and Gay was so worked upon that he was finally induced to confess He told how the schemes of the gang were worked and implicated W. Williams and W J Bartlett, switchmen and W P McGuire, day yardmaster of the Puget Sound & Shore railroad, and G N Lewis, a brakeman on the Columbia & Puget sound Besides these, Gay charged his uncle, Dr A. Gay, a well-known dentist and politician of Seattle with being a party to the larcenies of the gang The four first named were arrested at various times during the day and are in jail Dr Gay is practically under arrest, having promised to appear in court to morrow

Dr Gay indignantly denies the accusations against him and says he can clear his name of any such imputation. He admits however that he had one of the suits It had been given to him by his nephew, and he accepted it in good faith as a present. The case will come up for examination to-morrow and very interesting developments are then expected

JUSTICE McLEAN'S PROPHESY

He Foresaw the Civil War but Not the Greater Nation Afterward

Probably in the whole history of jurisprudence no two judicial utterances were ever so widely and so critically read by the mass of people outside the legal profession as the opinions of Chief Justice Taney and Justice John McLean, in the celebrated Dred Scott case, in the supreme court of the United States The opinion of the chief justice affirmed the "divine right" of the institution of slavery, and uttered the remarkable obiter dictum that the negro had no rights which the white man was bound to respect. That of Justice McLean sharply dissented, and with irresistible logic and statesman like eloquence, enunciated the doctrine that slavery was contrary to right, and had its origin only in power. Six justices voted with Taney and but one Justice Curtis, with McLean An outraged public sentiment carried the case on appeal to a higher court, and in that stern and bloody arbitrament the decision was reversed and Justice McLean's wisdom, courage and patriotism vindicated That he foresaw this appeal and looked forward to its ultimate decision with gloomy forebodings is evident from a private letter hitherto unpublished written on Christmas eve 1860 just before the outbreak of the civil war He wrote to a friend in Albany

"The public mind is deeply absorbed in the deplorable condition of our country Lately I hear a common opinion uttered that our people are incapable of governing themselves. There can be no doubt that the moral basis of government is destroyed, and beyond this what have we to expect? The English government has fixedness of the sovereignty and when the ministry become unpopular they resign their places They have a limited right of suffrage a landed aristocracy a public debt all binding the nation together These give permanency to the government and strength to withstand derangement

"To all human appearances our government is to be broken in pieces and fall into utter ruin I have feared this for several years No free government can long be maintained without high intelligence and public virtue We are, in fact a spectacle to the nations of the earth and it is to be feared that we shall all before long become involved in a destructive war"

Justice McLean died soon after and but eight days before the first shot on Fort Sumter—too soon to see the actual fulfillment of his prophecy of war but too soon, also to see a nation emerge triumphantly from its baptism of blood, and his own once rejected decision vindicated and embodied into the constitution of the United States —New York Mail and Express

ABOUT NUTS AND PERSIMMONS.

A Correspondent Who Has Some Facetious and Other Remarks to Make on This Subject

PORTLAND, Oct 6

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

A few remarks made in these columns recently by one of the staff leads this particular scribe to infer that his collaborateur did not come from a persimmon country and that consequently he never hunted the opossum by the light of the moon, and knows nothing about the slow not swift delights of that particular form of the chase No evidently did he ever know what it was when a boy to shoulder his single barreled flintlock muzzle loading buckaction shotgun a relic of the pioneer days of Kentucky and cramming a pone of corn bread and a slice of fried bacon in his coat pocket whistle to "Bose" or "Mig" or "Jock" or "Tige" just as his squirrel dog happened to be named and start over the hills and far away in search of Bob White quail meadow larks squirrels wood ducks Bickers and such small deer If he had done these things, he would remember how about noon he divided his frugal lunch with "Jock" or "Tige" and then started out on the hunt for more birds how he followed a fox squirrel from tree to tree in the thick woods for the whole of a late fall afternoon and just before dusk found that he was off the trail and plumb lost and as hungry as a wolf in a deep snow He would also remember that just about the time that the fury of hunger was getting the best of him, he happened to cast his eyes upward in the gloaming and saw faintly gleaming on bending boughs anywhere from ten thousand to a million half golden half purple tinted globes of honeyed sweetness and realizing that the kindly spirit of Jack Frost had done its perfect work and that he had nothing to do but reach and pick off or shake the tree and pick up the fruit he proceeded to do so and stayed his stomach forthwith And this being accomplished he rose up refreshed and whistled to Tige or Mage and said Good dog let's find our way home and straightway Tige feeling that he was relied upon to do the correct thing, at once led him "out of the wilderness.

If any brother Quill had ever been fortunate enough to pass through these experiences he would not have spoken slightingly of this luscious fruit Possibly he was right from his standpoint. The persimmon he tasted had probably not been touched by the frost, and no persimmon is ready for business until a killing frost has transmuted its acids and astringents into as near pure honey as anything that the bee done can be found on this terrestrial globe As for any brother's remark about the possum farm speed the day when they will be plentiful Roast possum and sweet potato is good muck a muck and possum gravy is mighty good sop for ash pones

My fellow scribbler moreover says there are no nuts in Oregon He is mistaken He can if he looks see bushel baskets full of what are labeled Oregon hazel nuts for sale in Portland stores The boys and the girls in the country precincts have lots of fun every year gathering hazel nuts. Moreover there are walnuts in Oregon native and to the manor born An old pioneer grew indignant on this subject the other day Why said he, "I can show that OREGONIAN man walnut trees grown from seed brought across the continent forty odd years ago and these same trees have grandchildren in bearing So much by way of prelude

Thousands possibly tens of thousands of old grayheads here in Oregon remember how happy they were in early life when Saturday came and with bag or basket on arm or a homemade small wagon rattling behind them they started for the roads with schoolmates or brothers and sisters and cousins to gather wild grapes pawpaws persimmons hickory nuts walnuts chestnuts, hazel nuts and "ick" Boys and girls are to follow them in endless procession for generations to come If the old pioneers had all of them been as thoughtful and provident as the pioneer who planted the walnuts forty odd years ago and had scattered nuts along the trails the woods would have been full of them now, and the children who are coming to Oregon in the good years of grace, from Ohio and Indiana and Kentucky and Tennessee, would have been saved many a fit of homesickness by having it in their power to go grapping and nutting, instead of grieving when they see

Autumn lying here and there
A fiery finger on the leaves

And feeling at the same time that their holiday sport is denied them here

There is a black walnut tree in Salem, which a White Sweetwater grape vine has clambered and every season the tempting clusters hang just far enough out of reach to lure the adventurous boy to risk his arm or leg or neck to clamber up for them But the tree and vine are in town, and the spice of mystery is lacking, and the grapes ripen and fall off or dry up But if such trees and vines were in the woods what a crowd of boys would besiege them, and what a bevy of girls would stand under the trees to catch the clusters in their aprons The same longings for wild fruit wild game and wild nuts will be in the hearts of the children who come from the East twenty five, thirty forty, fifty, one hundred years hence The present generation should make ready for them and make the woods of Oregon beautiful with these gracious gifts of kindly and bountiful mother nature

The display of such things in the exhibition hall of the N P I A furnish abundant evidence that it can be done Do it and when those now living are dust and ashes and their very burial places forgotten whole generations of happy rollicking youngsters will rise up and call them blessed in the beautiful Indian summers of future years in Oregon Plant nuts at random in the woods and take the chances on their coming to maturity Send back home and get some seeds and cuttings of the wild fox grapes and muscadines Stick a cutting down here and there by a thrifty oak or ash or cottonwood sapling Scatter the seed in the woods The wild grape is peculiarly an American institution It is a thing of beauty It formed a staple article of diet among the pilgrims to Plymouth Rock Whittier sings as follows

'The wild grape by the riverside
And tasseless ground nut trailing slow,
The table of the woods supplied'

Let us have wild grapes and wild nuts in all parts of Oregon A T H

[The above is all very fine and winds up with some good advice But THE OREGONIAN did not state that there are no nuts in Oregon, but on the contrary said that chestnuts and walnuts, both black and English did well in this state and it was a pity that hickory nuts, butternuts, etc had not also been planted here Of course every one knows that hazel nuts are plentiful in parts of this state but they are the only nuts native to the state]

Remarkable Adventures of a Strolling Musician Who Is With Liberati.

He Was Praised and Petted by Royalty and Permitted to Gaze Upon the Beauties in the Harem of the Shah.

Liberati's great band numbers among its members Cavaliere Hubert Crispini, the celebrated soloist on the slide trombone, violin, xylophone and various other instruments He has not yet favored the visitors to the exposition with a solo but it is quite probable that he will be heard before the close of the season

The Cavaliere is a gentleman of pleasing address and possesses to a rare degree the easy and confident bearing that distinguishes the genuine cosmopolitan He speaks fluently nearly all the languages of modern civilization and has a smattering of semi barbarous tongues picked up in his rambles all over the globe He has visited many lands and has been praised and petted by royalty The gold medal which he wears during the concerts at the exposition was presented to him by the shah of Persia. He has also received presents from other sovereigns, and he has high testimonials without end Signor Crispini gave an OREGONIAN reporter a history of his travels, which may be epitomized somewhat as follow

Yes I was born in Italy some 38 years ago I was always fond of excitement and adventure, and while a mere boy enlisted as a volunteer under Garribaldi's banner After the campaign was ended my people sent me to the musical college at Naples where I stayed till I was 19 But that was too quiet for my tastes, so one night I ran off with only 20 cents in my pocket and stowed myself away on board an American naval training ship that was about to sail for South America On the way we put in at the Madeira Islands, for a day or two where I went ashore and scraped up the acquaintance of a wine merchant He took me into his vast cellar where there were hundreds of barrels, all marked with the vintage year Here" he said "is some real Madeira that is rarely obtained by any one but kings and nabobs It is very different from what is put on the open market Try some" I did—two big glassfulls It was so soft and delicious that I did not feel its effects at the time but when I got out into the air I felt as if I had swallowed as much rare old brandy

Well, the voyage was resumed, and several months spent in the Southern waters, with stops at the chief cities on the South American coast finally reaching Boston harbor in time to hear that France and Germany had begun the war The following nine years I spent in this country, playing violin or slide trombone in all manner of troupes and bands, from the Mapleson and Strakosh Opera Companies to circus or minstrel shows, and traveling over the land from Vermont to Tennessee

AROUND THE WORLD

Then in 1879, I started on the concert-giving ramble that was to take me around the world in the opposite direction I made a specialty of the xylophone, which, as you doubtless know, is made of bars of wood of different lengths, tied with straws and played with wooden hammers I also played the verophone—champagne glasses, you know partly filled with water and set in musical vibration by rubbing the edges with your fingers—and the violin I first appeared in London several times, with what success you can judge for yourself from the press reviews in this scrap book The book as you see, contains notices of my concert from almost every country where newspapers are published Here too, are a lot of written certificates of appearances before various kings and princes that I got where newspapers failed

From London I went to Paris, then down into Spain, stopping at Madrid Barcelona and other cities, thence over into South France taking in Lyons Marseilles, Nice, Cannes Monte Carlo and the whole Riviera, where the earthquake did such damage two or three years ago That brought me to Genoa and Italy All through the peninsula I had fine opportunities You know the Italians are such lovers of music and so keen after the novelties that are often introduced between the acts of grand opera. So I played at the principal theaters down to Naples and back to Venice Thence by way of Trieste I went to Vienna, where the Waltz King 'Johann Strauss, engaged me for one of his orchestral concerts and kept me for four At one of these the emperor, one of the grand dukes and other court dignitaries were present In a suburban town near Vienna I gave a concert with Levo ch, the well known composer and pianist I traveled then down through Dalmatia into Greece, stopping at Athens, among other cities and securing these press reviews in modern Greek for my scrap book Then over to Brindisi and up to Naples again, whence I sailed for Egypt, touching at Sicily and Malta on the way

At Alexandria, Cairo and Port Said I gave concerts with more or less success In the latter town I joined a large party of American tourists bound to Palestine, In these regions some interesting curiosities were added to my collection, among them these dried shoots of Nile weed that grew in the shadow of the great pyramid Cheops and the specimens of the three different kinds of leaves I found growing on one of the evergreen trees

AT JERUSALEM,

Where I put up at the headquarters of the Russian church—having introductions to some of their officials—I tried my best to get up a concert, offering to give the proceeds to any religious charity But on all sides I was met by scornful laughter at the bare idea of giving a concert in the Holy Land So I went back to Port Said pretty soon and sailed for Constantinople Thence I journeyed up into Russia, giving concerts at Odessa, Moscow St Petersburg and other places. I wish you could read some of these Russian clippings The Czar was living at Katschina then and I went there, expecting to reap a harvest from the courtiers and diplomats But my every movement was watched by the police, and I soon received notice to leave in twenty four hours and no concert

Next I traveled through Poland and Roumania, stopping at Warsaw, Czernowitz Bucharest, Rutschuk and Sofia The Russo Turkish war having been but recently ended I found many Russian officers in the latter capital to whom my record in their native cities was a good recommendation They arranged for me a private concert before Prince Alexander and a number of invited guests The prince congratulated me in person and caused his chamberlain to send me 350 roubles and the cordial endorsement. From Sofia I went on to Philippopoli, Adrianople and back to Constantinople where a concert was arranged to be given before the sultan, but the arrangements were unfortunately stopped at the last moment by the news of the bombardment of Alexandria So I passed on to Tiflis, which you remember as the center of war for so long a time and I remember it as the hottest city I ever entered But when I got on the edge of the mountainous basin where Tiflis lies a' stewing, I was rewarded by the most superb view I ever saw I wish I had language to describe to you that view from the Balkan pass Well I went down to Nijni Novgorod, the old Muscovite capital and now a great Russian military station—where I had exceptional success—and sailed down the broad Volga to Astrakhan on the Caspian sea Journeying by way of Baku the center of the great oil region where I found a number of Americans leading in the development of its astonishing resources I passed on into Persia, where some of my most interesting experiences were had Reshet, the center of Persia's great carpet-making interests was the first large town I reached Here I had my first night in a caravansarie, slept on the stone floor in my overcoat fighting the cold very feebly and the enormous rats quite unsuccessfully with the few sticks of firewood I was able to buy at an outrageous price The next night found me forewarned and forearmed Traveling thence by caravan, with mules and the splendid horses of that northern section, I came to Kasvin, a provincial capital.

WITH THE SHAH

A kind of carriage took me over the plains to Teheran, which I found to be a really fine city, with handsome boulevards, imposing buildings, a metropolitan police system, many Europeans in the service of the government or of the Indo-European Telegraph Company—in short, a true cosmopolitan capital. I arrived on the first day of Maharan, the great Persian religious season lasting forty days and otherwise much like our Lent The streets were crowded with fanatics in the most grotesque costumes, dancing, and gesticulating wildly On the same day the shah returned from a hunting expedition, and entered the city with a magnificent military parade that gave me a new idea of Persia's soldiery. As I was watching the display from the hotel window, another guest pointed out two men riding by in the line with the words 'There's a countryman of yours—General Andrini, a high officer in the army And there is another, Count Di Montiforto, chief of the national police ' These officers afterward were of the greatest assistance to me in gaining the unprecedented favor of giving a concert before the great ruler himself You know, in Persia the shah comes first then God So the forty days of Maharan, during which no instrument can be touched, were none too long for the wire-pulling that finally reached its object in a formal notice from the royal chamberlain that his majesty would condescend to listen to a concert

A German pianist, who happened to be in the city and myself were ushered into the 'White Chamber," where the monarch grants diplomatic audiences It was a lofty room fully 100 feet long, elaborately decorated in white and with a superb seamless carpet of the same color covering the entire floor That carpet took years they told me, in the process of weaving for that particular room and must be worth a fabulous sum judging from the prices brought in the market by small rugs of a quality much inferior to it At one end of the room was a gorgeously bejeweled throne and across the middle hung a heavy curtain beyond which I soon understood the ladies of the royal harem were assembled to listen No one was in our half of the room beside we two musicians, but the shah, some eunuchs and a number of little boys who kept running behind the curtain and out again I had picked up some native airs to play and the shah took a lively interest in the music He tried to play the glasses himself, and asked me in good French why he could not make them sound as I did, chatting very pleasantly most of the time

On a sudden the heavy curtain yielded to the jerks of the small boys and fell completely down, revealing to my startled and delighted eyes at least seventy superb specimens of female beauty They screamed and started to run, but the shah called out laughingly Never mind, these gentlemen are used to seeing ladies at the time in their own country " And so we were, but I had never seen them dressed in the fashion that I now had a good chance to observe as I played They wore full Turkish trousers and open bodices, all of the richest materials and made so as to leave the arms, limbs and busts uncovered The hair was elaborately dressed and blazing with jewels It was not only a

But also one which, as I was afterwards told in numerous congratulatory remarks, no other man had even seen except the royal master himself The shah invited me to play for him again but that time the harem was invisible He sent me this gold medal and Firman or diploma, conferring the order of "Asp"—at least that is as near as I can come to the name of the order, which I translate as 'Cavaliere'—together with 1000 Toman in gold, equal to $2000 From the minister of the interior I also received this royal passport over the kingdom which I found would bring any Persian to my feet

Leaving Teheran with regret I went to Amadan, the center of the great vineyards, from which comes the delicious national wine sherbet There I was very hospitably treated by another of the Shah's many brothers He had an organ in his palace which was no doubt the result of the presence of a number of American missionaries I gave a concert there, choosing 'Home, Sweet Home," as one of the selections and the natives were much surprised to see one of the American ladies burst out crying as she heard the old, familiar air After the concert the prince entertained us all at a diner a la Persan where the choicest viands and wines were served on a tablecloth laid over the carpet and eaten without forks as we lay on rugs Very elegant, but quite as uncomfortable

Twenty more days of caravan travel brought me to Bagdad, where I found many Europeans and a bustling commerce and whence I took a short trip to the grass covered mounds and the curious old bridge of boats (built by the Romans across the Euphrates) which alone are left to mark the the spot where once stood Babylon, the Great From Bagdad I sailed down the Tigris fighting monstrous mosquitoes stopping to see the Pantheon like tomb of the Prophet Ezra, passing the imposing ruins of ancient Persian splendor, marveling at the forests of dead trees that surround the station, "Garden of Eden" where the four rivers of Mesopotamia unite, and finally reaching Bassura at the head of the Persian gulf Thence I sailed for India, passing the Isle of St Omar on the way, and spent some time in Bombay and Calcutta as well as in Rangoon the chief city of English Burmah. These countries are too much anglicized to take your time describing them.

KING THEEBAW'S GUEST.

But Upper Burmah is quite otherwise and at its capital Mandalay, I had an interesting experience Through the few Italian officers employed there I got leave to play before King Theebaw and his queen. My instruments were first examined closely for dynamite and I was compelled to dress in white linen trousers, vest and tie, with swallow-tailed coat, and with bare head and feet Then I was forbidden to cast a single glance at the royal faces, and had to play in a kneeling posture between times holding my head on the palms of my hands pressed to the ground I had gotten a little flageolet boy to play me one of their curious national airs, which I had taken down on paper The queen was much taken by this popular tune in its new shape, marveling greatly at my playing from the piece of paper, and commanded it to be repeated seven or eight times She afterward sent me a ring set with a diamond and rubies, and King Theebaw sent me 1000 rupees neatly tied up in a pair of fine native silk handkerchiefs.

Thence I went back to Rangoon over to Penang, in Malasia, to Singapore and to Bangkok, capital of Siam. Here I found much civilization, shook hands with the king at his birthday reception, saw the famous sacred "white elephant" (which had no white about it except some spots on its ears) and gave a most successful concert Hong Kong was my next point, where I staid some time, running over to Macao, the Portuguese settlement, where the exiled poet Camoens lived and died and also taking a trip over to Manilla, in the Philippine islands, where the finest cigars in the world can be bought for a cent apiece and are actually given away by the handfuls to the European traveler

From Yokohama I sailed to San Francisco and at once took a steamer for the Sandwich islands That was a very interesting trip I played at Honolulu and also at Hilo, the chief sugar producing town King Kalakaua, who is also a Mason, treated me with much favor and I was assisted in the concerts by a number of the American residents who seemed especially musical. I returned then to San Francisco, where I remained from 1885 until the fall of 1886, when I went to St Louis with the First Regiment band that accompanied the Golden Gate commandery to the Masonic convention The band disbanded there Since that time I have traveled considerably in the United States, and for the past year have been with Liberati's band"

A Point Overlooked.

Philadelphia Press.

The poor mother who walked the streets of New York on Saturday night until her infant babe died in her arms, too poor to have a shelter too ignorant to know where to seek one, too devoted to her children to earn it with the wages of shame, gave one sad proof that in successfully organizing charity so as to exclude the undeserving poor too little attention has been given to the task of finding the deserving poor.

Scene—First Dinner to the Family Physician by Young Married Couple.

FAMILY PHYSICIAN—Do you know, there seems to be a natural flavor about this dinner that is most appetizing? What method do you use in cooking?

LADY OF THE HOUSE—Well, Doctor, when I was married my mother insisted that I should have nothing else than a Charter Oak Stove. From my earliest recollection I remember hearing her praise it, and her cooking was superb So when I went to housekeeping I insisted on having that kind of stove Of course the improvements made in the modern Charter Oak Stove are wonderful. Ours has all the latest, including the Wire Gauze Oven Door. I do not understand the process exactly but they tell me that meats cooked in an oven with these doors, retain their juices and flavors to a much greater degree than by any other process. Perhaps you can explain the theory, Charles?

CHARLES (the Husband)—I can't remember all that I was told, but I know the agent gave a most clear and scientific statement of the principle.

DOCTOR—Well, it is hardly professional to [illegible], but as I have one in my own house, I am inclined to think he would not be living here if he had not been a user of the Charter Oak Stoves. But as I have one [illegible] I think I can enlighten you Of course it [illegible] to you scientifically, and we have not time for [illegible] Knighted in Europe for his scientific attainments, [illegible] baking and roasting meats in air tight ovens He asserted that it was as essential to health [illegible] as that we should breathe pure, fresh air, and that the food cooked therein became tainted and [illegible] was not discovered for many years after [illegible] fresh air to enter the oven uniformly without [illegible] plished by Mr Filley's invention of the Wire [illegible] through the wire gauze in the form of very fine [illegible] air is diffused and heated without forming a [illegible] called a chemical decomposition with the aid of the [illegible] and this is furnished by the air Again, the meat retains its most nutritious juices, which become dried [illegible] and the meat is cooked perfectly in the same way as the old fashioned spit of our grandfather's time It also improves the baking of bread making it much lighter [illegible] baked in a Charter Oak Stove with Wire Gauze Oven Door [illegible] strong proof that the bread is pure and healthy

SUNDAY AT THE CITY PARK

The Bear Pit—A Source of Amusement—Other Improvements

The bear pit at the park now contains four bears and is a great attraction to the young folks who feed the animals on peanuts, candy and cakes The big old grizzly seems to enjoy the company of his cousins two of which are young black bears and one a lean looking, half grown cinnamon bear They do not growl and fight as bears are supposed to do but seem as playful as kittens and amuse themselves by climbing the knotty bear post in the center of the pit. One of them yesterday went into his den and made a curious noise for some time and a little girl who was present said she guessed it was taking a music lesson

The knoll on which the old cottage stands has been nicely cultivated and seeded down and a drive way made from near the corner of the lower garden to the top of the knoll, where it circles around a plot on which a fountain will be placed in the sweet by and-by—when the park has a water supply. From near the fountain the finest view of the city and surroundings is to be had, and in days to come it will be a favorite lounging place for visitors.

STYLES OF ARCHITECTURE.

A Mania To Do Something Regardless of Beauty and Artistic Merit.

The Craze for Novelty Manifesting Itself in [illegible] Buildings as Well as in [illegible] Church Buildings.

[illegible] advent of the modern antique idea [illegible] into Portland, and an archi[illegible] surprising mania has been de[illegible] architects and builders so do [illegible] they call original unique or [illegible] never sacrifice of real beauty or [illegible] merit.

[illegible] of the city contain some of the creations of the architect, whose [illegible] made here portions the centers of art. Then again, there are many designs [illegible] architectural building ex[illegible] of the refuse material [illegible] architect. As a consequence [illegible] very short lived compared to [illegible] of real architects.

[illegible] is not confined to real [illegible] with few excep[illegible] more pretentious buildings. [illegible] little in the shape of public [illegible] upon with pride that is, so far [illegible] design is concerned.

[illegible] architecture Portland is sadly be[illegible]. There is not a church [illegible] claim to anything like [illegible] of design. There are several [illegible] able proportion nearly com[illegible] cost enough to have secured for [illegible] the design and some claim to [illegible] of style but an educated archi[illegible] is forced to admit that those [illegible] painfully deficient in the [illegible] of architectural expression [illegible] of design elegance of pro[illegible] of detail and ornament [illegible] the subordination of all parts to the [illegible] and effect of the whole, [illegible] absolute poverty of invention [illegible] the external details of [illegible]. In short, the appearance [illegible] of these edifices betray a lack of [illegible] training on the part of the architect [illegible] careful study of design. The latter [illegible] easily understood by the inexperi[illegible] but may be explained as [illegible] the forms proportions and com[illegible] the constituent parts of the design [illegible] and put together with the minimum [illegible] effort. It excites wonder and dis[illegible] to see what they are and what they [illegible] been for the same expenditure and it [illegible] understand what source of reason [illegible] the idea of putting one of those edi[illegible] the bank until the corona of the [illegible] comes within a few feet of the [illegible] many times the size of the body, [illegible] narrow and small.

[illegible] idea conveyed in the design of [illegible] costly edifices seems to be the [illegible] an architectural feature can be [illegible] fashionable and esthetic. It must [illegible] this lesson in view the architect [illegible] the fundamental principles of propor[illegible] expression of dignity all graceful out[illegible] of the building. No oppor[illegible] overlooked to distort every architect[illegible] to the caprice of what may be thought [illegible] what some call colonial style. As no [illegible] be grand or beautiful without style, [illegible] conglomerations are called colonial [illegible] they are such there must be a great [illegible] styles, the must be as numerous [illegible] cranks. As well may we expect a [illegible] work from a novice as a noble [illegible] a pseudo architectural expert.

[illegible] wonder that it is to architecture [illegible] the most splendid monuments of [illegible] labor we need not be sur[illegible] travelers in their rambles over the [illegible] the dwellings of individuals and [illegible] the public buildings of a country or city [illegible] in their rudeness or their magnifi[illegible] extent to which the arts and sciences [illegible] and upheld and largely fix in their [illegible] the commercial value of a city, as archi[illegible] at first sight an index to its [illegible] and refinement. So well is this un[illegible] Europe that all public buildings are [illegible] keeping that idea in view, [illegible] be economical outside of other con[illegible] to build the larger and more pre[illegible] building at least with some regard for [illegible] beauty! Style is simply truth which is [illegible] understood and but little appreciated [illegible] building can be grand or beautiful without style.

[illegible] true design is but little understood can [illegible] listening to a discussion of [illegible] the various buildings around them [illegible] consider a worthy of all praise a build[illegible] is a mere conglomeration of miscel[illegible] and distorted proportion and will [illegible] unworthy a well and truthfully de[illegible] building. An untruthful structure is often [illegible] beautiful even when the fundamental [illegible] architecture have been violated.

There are in this city many buildings devoid of [illegible] design. Then they are painted in dull [illegible] which on a wet or cloudy day [illegible] look like paths through a grave. [illegible] I am glad to see that the builders are grad[illegible] out of this idea. Several of the [illegible] erected this year are of good design and [illegible] makeup gives them a bold jaunty [illegible] is in strong contrast with many of [illegible] buildings. The architecture of the city [illegible] enriched with beauty and sublimity of [illegible] a noble monument is at once histor[illegible] and poetry instructing exalting and in[illegible] the generations of men.

PORTLAND'S DIME MENAGERIE

The Attractions Offered by Colonel Winston—Buffaloes, Bear Other Animals—Alaska Curios—Etc.

Col. Winston's Dime Menagerie at No. 163 Third street is, without doubt the most satisfactory ever brought to this city. Another striking attraction is the large collection of Indian relics and curios gathered through out Alaska. The collection comprises all kinds of tools, garments and ornaments useful and otherwise made by the Esquimaux and Alaska Indians. The exhibit covers an entire wall of the tent.

Panoramic views of Dante's "Inferno" is another interesting feature of the menagerie. These views are wonderfully realistic in make up and coloring, and are a source of interest as well as amusement to all who go there.

No objectionable characters are allowed to enter the tent, and the manager has what he claims a first-class, cheap and popular place of amusement.

LEAVING CALIFORNIA.

Immigration Attracted to Oregon by the Superior Climate of This State.

Salem Statesman

Immigration is pouring into Oregon, a large portion of which comes from California. This immigration is attracted by the cheaper and better lands of Oregon especially in the Willamette valley where lands are held at a fair value and not [illegible] to an extravagant price as is the case with certain boom ridden districts of California. The land in the Willamette valley is the most fert[illegible] prize farm that [illegible] twenty [illegible] of [illegible] 1100 acres [illegible] can be found anywhere [illegible] the four [illegible] of California. But it is no exception here in Oregon [illegible] of the farm [illegible] hundreds of other tracts above the valley are just as good as the so called prize farm though the great majority may not be so [illegible] climate and scenery of Oregon will compare favorably with those of California and in the matter of fruits save such as [illegible] particularly to the tropics ours are superior in size appearance and flavor. Those who have visited the two states in the fruit season can testify to this fact. There is nothing strange in the turning of the human tide in this direction, when all the facts are considered.

Excellent Work Done by the Ladies' Union Relief Society.

Want a New Road—Fire Bugs Around—Military Matters—Jubilee Sunday—Town Booming—Lodge Organized—Accidents.

Albina can well be pleased with the success of her charitable society the Ladies Union Relief Society which was organized December 9 1887. Many deeds of kindness have been performed by them, and many a destitute family clothed and provided with the necessaries of life. Not content with this, they branched out and with their endeavors have had a block donated for a home to be built in a limited time. The articles of incorporation have been filed and the institution to be known as the Patton Home for the Friendless is under their direction and a board of directors, consisting of Dr J J Fisher Dr N S Spinney, Rev W O Forbes Messrs. W H Foster and A Watson. The proposed home was to have been built by this time but not having sufficient funds on hand Mr Patton generously extended the time until next August. In the meantime the members of the society are as busy as bees devising various methods of raising the necessary amount. At present they have on hand about $500.

They have given socials and balls and will continue to do so as long as they can give pleasure and satisfaction to the public and profit to the home.

The present officers are Mrs Mary Knot, president; Mrs. Mary Foster vice president; Mrs Freelove Lelay treasurer; Mrs Eva Clarke secretary; Mr Mary Evans, corresponding secretary.

ATTEMPTED INCENDIARISM

An attempt was made a few weeks ago to set fire to the Brendle block, but was kept quiet thinking that the perpetrators would be discovered. H C King who keeps the Red Front store had occasion to go into the cellar, and there discovered material piled up ready to ignite. A paste board box had a hole cut out, and in this was placed a lighted candle. Above this was several rolls of excelsior and a number of boards sticks and paper piled up. For some reason the candle went out, and the fire was a failure for that time. No clue has been found as to the identity of the would be fire bug.

PETITION FOR A NEW ROAD

A petition signed by the property owners in Patton addition Central Albina and North Albina and vicinity has been presented to the county court praying for the location of a road beginning at the north end of Mississippi avenue in Multnomah and extending along Oak street in Patton's addition about thirty-six feet thence north along F street to Division, and along First street in North Albina to intersect with the proposed county road running east and west through North Albina. It is claimed that this will make the route about a half a mile shorter than by the present one.

PRESBYTERIAN JUBILEE SUNDAY

The "Jubilee" Sunday was observed yesterday by the Presbyterian Sunday school and was quite enjoyable and highly appreciated by the great number present. The exercises consisted of singing and speaking by the scholars. A prize was given to the scholar bringing in the largest number of pupils during the month and was awarded to Fay Barnes. The Sunday school is in a flourishing condition, and has just procured a new library of 1[illegible] volumes.

A mission Sabbath school was started in the afternoon on the corner of San Rafael street and Marguerite avenue.

ORGANIZING

The Odd Fellows held a special meeting Monday evening in Dr Wise's dental office for the purpose of organizing a lodge in Albina. Grand Secretary A N Gambell was present to facilitate matters. Mr Al Laurie was elected chairman and J A Estes secretary. Eleven names were presented for membership. They will meet again this evening at the Knights and Ladies of Honor hall to complete the organizing of the lodge.

PREPARING TO MOVE

Company D will move in a short time into their new armory above Pacquet & Smith's new brick store, which will be completed soon. The company will place a large flagstaff on the roof. At their last regular meeting Sergeant Hill and Corporal Gould were appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions from the business men sufficient to purchase a $25 flag.

HOMEMADE WINE

Mr John Brendle is now making his own wine from the large amount of grapes that he has raised on his place. Mr Brendle has done this several years, and this year will put up 200 gallons of wine. He also has about 800 pounds of prunes dried that were raised in his garden, besides the great amount of other fruits in their season.

STRANGE, BUT TRUE

The steam motor brought by the Willamette Bridge Railway Company and placed on the track on Williams avenue last Thursday, attracted a great deal of attention it being the first motor on the new track in Albina. It is to be used to assist in the construction of the Electric railway.

WILL ATTEND

Iolanthe lodge No 21 K of P, and Uniform Rank Iolanthe division No 3, will attend the annual session of the grand lodge of Knights of Pythias, to be held in Astoria Tuesday October 8. They will go in a body, and anticipate a grand time.

BOOMING

That property is booming right along may be inferred from the fact that real estate firms are springing up like mushrooms and offices are being opened on every other street corner in the city.

AN ACCIDENT

W L Gould, fireman on switch engine No 1[illegible], fell off while filling the headlight lamp last week and sprained his wrist, and has to lay off for awhile.

THROWN FROM A HORSE

A carpenter, George Roslyn by name was thrown last Monday from a horse and had his right arm broken. Dr Fisher reduced the fracture.

OF INTEREST TO MARINERS.

The Hydrographic and Signal Offices to Co-operate.

Something Instructive Regarding Fog Signals—Disasters and Mishaps During September—Review of the Month Just Passed.

Branch hydrographic offices are now established at nine of our principal ports: Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Savannah, New Orleans, Portland (Oregon) and San Francisco. In addition to these branch offices, arrangements have been made with the chief signal officer U S army by means of which special facilities will be offered to masters of vessels at certain other ports for the comparison of their barometers and thermometers and the obtaining of late and reliable information regarding obstructions to navigation, changes in lights and buoys, etc.

The stations of the U S signal service selected for the purpose are as follows: Eastport, Portland, Me, New London, New Haven, Wilmington, Southport, Charleston, Key West, Pensacola, Mobile, Galveston and San Diego, Cal. The observers in charge of these stations have been directed by the chief signal officer to devote as much time as possible consistently with the discharge of their regular duties, to work in connection with this office and navigators are requested to take advantage of the opportunity to obtain pilot charts, notices to mariners and late nautical information of any kind.

FOG SIGNALS

Recent reports regarding the seeming failure of certain fog signals render it desirable to give the conclusions of an expert on the subject. The following is taken from a paper read before the Philosophical Society of Washington October 1 1881 by Mr Arnold B Johnson chief clerk of the Lighthouse Board.

When approaching from windward the fog signal is picked up earlier aloft than from leeward on deck. Do not assume that you are out of hearing distance because you fail to hear the signal, nor that you are at a greater distance because the sound is faint, nor that you are near because you hear it plainly.

Do not assume that you have or have not reached a given point in your course because you do or do not hear the signal with the same intensity as on some former occasion.

Do not assume that the signal has ceased sounding because you fail to hear it even when within easy ear shot.

Do not assume that the aberrations of audibility are the same in different fog signals.

Do not expect to hear the signals as well as usually when the upper and lower air currents run in different directions or when wind and tide do so or during a time of electric disturbance or when the sound must reach you from over an island or point of land.

When there is a bluff behind the signal be prepared for irregular intervals of sound such as would follow were the sound to ricochet like a cannon ball, thus you might hear it at two four six eight etc., miles and lose it at one three five seven etc miles or at any other combination of distances regular or irregular.

Until the laws governing these aberrations are evolved and a method discovered by which the irregularities can be corrected, you will do well, when you do not get the sound of a signal to assume that you may not hear the warning that is nevertheless faithfully sounded, heave your lead and use other means to make sure of your position.

REVIEW OF SEPTEMBER.

The month just passed has been a somewhat stormy one especially off the American coast and in the West Indies. Low barometer accompanied by gales of varying force prevailed along the transatlantic routes from the 4th to 13th inclusive after which there was a marked rise in pressure.

The most notable disturbance of the month was the West Indian hurricane which moved up from the West Indies during the first twelve days and occasioned hurricane winds and destructive floods off the middle Atlantic seaboard of the United States. As this storm is the subject of a special supplement issued with this chart it need only be said here that it seems to have originated east of the Windward islands the last few days of August reaching Antigua and Martinique on the 2d. Its vortex passed over St Christopher about midnight and thence the track is as plotted on the chart. The large area and severity of this hurricane must make it one of the most notable on record. Subsequent to the disappearance of this storm, high barometer prevailed generally along the coast until the 17th. On the 18th a depression formed in Maine increasing rapidly in intensity until the evening of the 19th; on the latter date strong gales were felt between Rhode Island and Nova Scotia. Gales also prevailed along the Atlantic coast from the 23d to 26th inclusive accompanying a tropical storm which moved up from the Gulf of Mexico where it was central on the 22d crossing the South Atlantic states and passing out to sea north of Hatteras on the 25th.

From the 13th to the 17th two distinct cyclonic centers crossed the Caribbean Sea forming one large barometric depression. The passage of the more northerly one was attended by gales of varying force on the south coast of Cuba. Reports at hand to date concerning these two storms are very meager but it is not improbable that they united north of Yucatan about the 18th recurving sharply on that date in about latitude 25 deg N and longitude 88 deg W and moving to the eastward across Florida.

A storm is reported from the neighborhood of lat 36 N long 80 W on the 11th, moving to the northward. It does not appear however to have covered a large area but the wind attained to full hurricane force and the barometer is reported, in one instance to have fallen as low as 29 08.

Another hurricane of marked intensity but very small area, is reported on the 9th in about latitude 43 deg N longitude 40 deg W, the wind shifting from south to north by way of east it lasted twelve hours; also September 3 latitude 18 deg 14 min N longitude 45 deg 6 min W a hurricane of great severity moving about W NW.

There has been a marked diminution of fog during the month of September. It was most notable in the straits of Belle Isle, off the Grand banks, and over Nantucket shoals. The 11th 12th and 13th, much fog accompanied the hurricane between Hatteras and Nantucket.

There has been an unusually large amount of ice in the straits of Belle Isle and to the eastward as far as the 49th meridian; considerable quantities were also reported south of the 50th parallel.

Do not allow the accumulation of Scurf or Dandruff when it can be easily prevented by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor.

A SLEEPING CAR MYSTERY

A Texas Gentleman Who Traveled Happily With Three Little Babies

A lady friend of our family had a peculiar experience on a sleeping car a few days ago, said William Henry Davis to a Cincinnati Enquirer reporter. She was returning from the East and during the day noticed a gentleman going in and out of the stateroom.

That fact did not attract her attention so much as the fact that she heard a child crying within. The lady watched for the mother but no one came. Her curiosity was aroused and she was never satisfied until she learned that the gentleman was from Texas and that he had in the stateroom three babies aged [illegible] and 9 months that he was taking to his home in that state, having brought them from the East.

He was traveling in good style, had a beautiful nurse [illegible] and the children were big and fat. [illegible] for this strange action [illegible] a secret with him for he remained [illegible].

When [illegible] Cincinnati he had to transfer. While [illegible] two of his [illegible] porter carried [illegible] to an O & M train. The [illegible] was very happy and [illegible] and talked [illegible] in the most jubilant manner.

THE NATIONAL BULLETIN.

Eastern Crop-Weather Report for the Week Ending September 23

Summary of the Remarks Received at Washington, D C, From the Different State Weather Bureaus—The Outlook

The following is taken from the National Crop Weather Bulletin for the week ending September 23.

The week ending September 23 has been colder than usual [illegible] Eastern Florida. The daily temperature for the week was but slightly below the normal over the cotton region east of Texas but it was decidedly cold generally throughout the Northern states and in Texas the daily temperature ranging from 5 deg to 10 deg below the average for the week.

The season from January 1 to September 23 was cooler than usual throughout the Southern states and the Ohio and Central Mississippi valleys the departure from the normal being slight but along the Gulf and South Atlantic coast the daily temperature for the entire period was about 1 deg below the average. In the Northwest Southern New England Eastern New York and Pennsylvania the season was warm and the daily temperature ranged from 1 deg to [illegible] deg above the normal. On the Pacific coast from San Diego to Portland the average daily temperature for the season was also about [illegible] deg higher than usual.

PRECIPITATION

There has been an excess of rainfall during the week [illegible] southward to Florida and over Georgia Alabama and the southern portions of Mississippi Louisiana and Texas. Local excesses are also reported in Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa Wisconsin Northern Dakota and Western Nebraska. Well distributed showers occurred over New England New York Pennsylvania and the Upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys while very light rains are reported from the Ohio valley Western Tennessee Western Ohio and Southeastern Michigan but no rain occurred in Northern Louisiana.

The rainfall for the season continues in excess on the Atlantic coast from New York to Florida and from the Missouri valley southward to the West Gulf coast generally over 80 per cent of seasonal rainfall occurred in the states of the Mississippi valley south of Iowa and Wisconsin [illegible] is reported from Eastern Kentucky northward to Eastern Michigan and generally throughout Minnesota and Northern Dakota. On the Pacific coast over [illegible] per cent of the normal rainfall occurred in California and about 60 per cent is reported from Oregon and Washington territory.

Killing frosts have occurred generally throughout the Northwest as far south as Southern Kansas Northern Missouri Northern Illinois and Eastern Michigan and light frosts as far south as Arkansas Tennessee and North Carolina and in the Middle Atlantic and New England states.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The weather during the week was generally favorable to farm work throughout the central valley and Northwest. Plowing and seeding in this section is well advanced [illegible] wheat is in good condition although slight damage from frost is reported in Northern Illinois and Kansas and more rain is needed in Michigan.

Kentucky reports that tobacco is being cut rapidly and that the frosts on Friday caused very slight damage. A warning of this frost was communicated from this office on Wednesday accompanied by a statement that tobacco should be cut by Thursday night.

The weather conditions throughout the cotton region during the week were generally favorable for cotton picking, but it was too cool in the West Gulf states for the late crop. The frost in Arkansas did no damage and the worms are disappearing from that state while in Mississippi the crop has been recently damaged by the worms. In Alabama the crop is reported as slightly stained and the conditions for the potato crop are excellent.

Owing to cool weather, cotton is opening slowly in North Carolina while a good crop below the average is reported in South Carolina where all other crops were improved and are in fine condition. Recent rains have greatly improved the cane crop in Louisiana.

The weather was generally favorable in New England New York and Pennsylvania and the frosts in these sections did little damage. Corn, buckwheat and wheat are reported good in New York while the grape crop is poor. In New England the white bean crop is good and grass seed well started. In New Jersey the weather was unfavorable cranberry bogs flooded, berries rotting little seeding and potatoes rotting in ground. General rains occurred in Oregon on Sunday, where plowing and seeding are progressing and grapes are being gathered for wine.

NOTE.—The issue of the weekly national crop bulletin for the current season will be discontinued on October 5, and the regular monthly bulletin will be issued at the close of each month until the opening of the next growing season.

PENSIONS FOR ALL.

The current number of the Popular Science Monthly, under the caption of "Pensions for All," contains a very able article by Brevet Brigadier-General M. M. Trumbull, who was colonel of the Ninth Iowa cavalry, which is in complete accord with the position taken by THE OREGONIAN in its issue of the 20th ult., viz, that, while no honorably discharged soldier or sailor should be either dependent on the charity of his comrades or go to the alms house, no indiscriminate service pension bill should be enacted for the benefit of all Union soldiers, rich and poor, dependent or self-supporting; sick or well, strong or disabled for exertion. According to the report of the commissioner of pensions for the year ending June 30, 1888, the total amount expended for all purposes by the bureau of pensions was $82,033,387, which represents nearly 31 per cent. of the entire outlay of the government. The advocates of the enactment of a general service or indiscriminate pension bill are voiced by Governor Fifer, of Illinois, who, speaking to the Illinois department of the G. A. R., in denunciation of the forced resignation of Commissioner Tanner, said:

> If the government paid $1,000,000 daily for pensions, the nation as a nation would be just as rich at the end of the year as it was before, as the money would still be in the hands of our own people.

There is something absolutely appalling in this demagogue defense of such a gigantic pension raid on the United States treasury. Of course this shallow and unprincipled plea is just as good for $5,000,000 a day for pensions as for $1,000,000, since, as General Trumbull grimly says, "The money is merely taken out of the hands of those who earned it and put into other hands to spend it." Governor Fifer's philosophy of political economy and the administration of the national finances is worthy of a socialist run stark mad, and justifies the suspicion that the governor is not always sane or quite sober when he addresses a campfire of veterans.

In the report of the commissioner of pensions for 1888 he says:

> "It thus appears that in the aggregate 1,166,926 pension claims have been filed since 1861, and in the same period 737,200 claims have been allowed."

This includes, of course, the claims of widows and dependent relatives. Although many have been dropped from the rolls by reason of death and other causes, the actual number of old soldiers on the pension list is 323,020, while there are thousands of claims on file not yet adjusted by the pension bureau. The cost of the pension roll for the year ending June 30, 1890, was nearly $90,000,000. Should an indiscriminate pension bill be enacted this would be swelled easily to over $500,000,000.

The figures of our present pension roll make the English pension list cheap by comparison. Last year the English pension roll, military naval and civil, contained the names of 155,402 persons altogether, who drew from the treasury £7,815,575, of which the army pensioners (97,004) drew £3,789,282, and the navy pensioners (38,366) drew £2,040,659. These army and navy pensioners of England, 135,370, represent the veterans of all England's wars from Waterloo to the present date. When we remember that this period includes the Afghan war, the Caffre war, the Sikh war, the Burmese and China war, the Crimean war, the Indian mutiny of 1857, the Zulu war, the Ashantee war, the war in Egypt and in the Soudan, not to mention minor conflicts, the pension roll of England's army veterans is surprisingly small. Her naval pensioners are proportionately larger, because England is a naval power, and comparatively speaking, enforces her authority far and wide through her ships rather than through her soldiers. Since Trafalgar, England's naval fights have been Algiers, under Exmouth, Navarino under Codrington, in the Baltic and Black sea during the Crimean war, and of recent years the bombardment of Alexandria. And yet this comparatively small pension list, which has accumulated during the last sixty years, excites the disgust of the Financial Reform Association of England, despite the fact that her list of military, naval and civil pensioners annually costs Great Britain but $40,893,450 against the cost of our purely military and naval list of nearly $90,000,000. Of this pension roll of England a century ago, the great Irish orator, Curran, said:

> This polyglot of wealth, this museum of curiosities, the pension list, embraces every link in the human chain, from the exalted excellence of a Hawke or a Rodney to the debased situation of the lady who humbleth herself that she may be exalted; but the lesson it inculcates forms its greatest perfection. It teaches that sloth and vice may eat the bread which virtue and honesty may starve for after they have earned it; it teaches the idle and the dissolute to look up for that support which they are too proud to stoop and earn; it directs the minds of men to an entire reliance on the ruling powers of the state.

These words of Curran are a just picture of the dangerous and corrupting influence of a vast, comprehensive system of government pensions. The system begins in justice and honor and ends in injustice, fraud and plunder. It begins with just rewards for public sacrifice and service and it ends with "favoritism" and fraud crowding the pension ranks with pretenders." Or as General Trumbull puts it:

> Every crippled soldier who has really been disabled by battle wounds must share his earned reward with men who never did a dollar's worth of service. He must drag along with him to the pension office a dozen "comrades" who never saw a battle and who never received the slightest injury to body, health or limb.

The arrears of pension law was in existence about two years, expiring by limitation July 1, 1880, and in that time the pension applications rose from 18,812 to 110,673, and in 1881, the law having expired, fell back to 18,455. In other words, the arrears of pension act acted as a bribe upon the veterans and as General Trumbull says, "invented 110,673 extra diseases, not made by the war but by the arrears of pension law, and put 110,000 additional names on the sick report for 1879 and 1880." The really crippled and wounded soldiers did not receive any benefit from the arrears of pension act, for they were already on the pension roll; the loot was divided between the cormorant claim agents, who lobbied this bill through congress and the "veterans," who suddenly discovered after the passage of the law that they had never had a really well day since Appomattox, and took an oath to that effect.

The wars of the United States that have filled the pension roll are the "war of 1812," the "Florida war," the "Mexican war" and the "war for the Union." It is nearly seventy-seven years since the war of 1812 began and seventy-four years since it ended. Yet there are nearly 1000 men on the pension rolls who claim they were soldiers in that war. Of course, with few exceptions, these male pensioners of 1812-15 are liars, for assuming them to be but 18 when they enlisted in 1814 they would be to-day 93 years of age. Men have drawn arrears of pension and been suddenly restored to health that made them an excellent "risk" for an insurance company.

The number of pensioners of 1861 to 1865 who died in 1888 was only 2 per cent. of the 300,000 pensioners on the roll, most of whom are between 45 and 65 years of age, and who are "all legally and officially suffering from wounds and diseases contracted in the army." General Trumbull fairly says of the arrears of pension applicants:

> Three hundred thousand healthy citizens of the like age will show a larger mortality than those diseased pensioners can show. This proves that a large proportion of those "veteran diseases" are fictitious.

The Mexican war pension bill, year after year rejected by congress, was finally passed on the assurance of the claim agents that the Mexican war soldiers were nearly all dead, but within thirty days after its passage, January 29, 1887, 21,290 soldiers and 7742 widows filed their claims for pensions under this law, chiefly men who started for Mexico during the nine months of negotiations that lasted from the capture of Mexico in September, 1847, until the declaration of peace, in June, 1848, fellows who saw no service whatever during that war, and this "Mexican war" pension swindle, which has all gone into the pockets of well-to-do men, is quoted to-day in justification of an indiscriminate service pension bill. If this indiscriminate service pension bill should ever become a law, then would follow probably the passage of the bill introduced by an Iowa congressman to give the soldiers the difference between the value of their pay in greenbacks and gold at the time of payment. This sum would exceed the fine imposed by Germany on France in 1871. General Trumbull has these words of solemn warning against the abuse of our pension system expanded by an indiscriminate service pension bill:

> A comprehensive pension system corrodes the heart of government and beguiles a people into servitude. A caste composed of pensioners is always the defender of existing wrongs. It believes that all reforms are assaults upon its own privileges, and that public honesty is dangerous. It can always be depended upon to support the pensioning power. The history of England shows how worthless ministries have retained office for years by a judicious distribution of pensions. National almsgiving weakens public spirit as it conquers private virtue.
> In the United States we have converted civil offices into gifts called patronage, and pensions will share the same fate. Where public offices are legal tender in payment for party services, pensions will become so too. To a dangerous extent they are used as political currency now. By a skillful use of pensions the party in power can bribe one portion of the people with the money of the other.

TRIUMPHS IN SURGERY.

While it is true that medical quacks abound and a "college" is now and then exposed, the practice of which is to turn unscrupulous and ignorant men out upon the world with knife and saw to engage in surgery, there is a good deal of cause for congratulation in the genuine progress of medical and surgical science within the past quarter of a century. The old days wherein the medical practitioner made his rounds with his saddle-bags and dosed out calomel and jalap promiscuously, or whipped out his lancet and drew blood profusely, were days of quackery, the practices of which were generally indorsed, whereas, though now quacks abound, even fools will not submit to the heroic treatment of those times.

Dr. W. W. Keen, in the current number of Harper's Magazine, shows how marvelous has been the progress of surgery within recent years. Operations that were not thought of, or if known were deemed too perilous to make, except as a last resort, twenty years ago, are now resorted to in common practice before the case becomes hopeless, and with a large percentage of the very best results. The knowledge of the human system has increased immensely, and the diagnosis of a case is no longer absolute guess work, or its treatment a series of experiments, each more dangerous than the disease.

Some of the figures presented by Dr. Keen are almost incredible. For example, in the matter of antiseptics, or guards against poisoning, employed in surgical operations of the present time, it is shown that before these safeguards were employed the rates of mortality in different hospitals ranged from 25 to 53 per cent., whereas the mortality in such cases now is from 1 to 4 per cent. As recently as during the Civil war fever was expected to follow amputation, and a serious operation from which the patient recovered in less than a month was regarded as a remarkable case. Antiseptic methods have abolished surgical fever, the temperature of the patient scarcely rises above the normal, and anywhere from the fifth to the tenth day after the operation the wound is well. Secondary hemorrhage is unknown, or at least wholly unnecessary, and no complications of any sort are dreaded by the intelligent surgeon.

In the treatment of the head and abdomen marvelous advance has been made. Twenty-five years ago the surgeon dared not open either with his knife; now either is opened for the removal of tumors and the like, and both are not infrequently explored for the purpose of making a diagnosis. Indeed, surgeons of eminence to-day do not hesitate to venture into any part of the human body for the purpose of meeting and routing the lurking foes of life that there intrench themselves. They can remove the wall of the skull and treat an abscess on the brain as safely as their forefathers in surgery could remove a thorn from the finger. So also with the spine and the lungs. And all of these steps forward in the science of surgery, aided by anæsthetics, without which many of the most delicate operations would be impossible, tend to prolong the lives of men and relieve humanity of a heavy load of suffering, while even greater triumphs in this grand auxiliary of healing are in sight.

The small minority in the first Washington legislature moves the Seattle Times to remark:

> There will not be half enough democrats in the next legislature to represent the party on the standing committees. It is customary to recognize the minority on all legislative committees. The president of the senate will be at his wits' end if he attempts to follow this custom next month. But two, at most, and possibly but one democratic state senator is elected, and there will be a dozen or more standing committees. If Senator Drum, of Pierce, who is the only democratic senator positively known to be elected, be spread out over all these committees, he will be thinner than the instrument which bears his name. It will be nearly as much of a puzzle to the speaker of the assembly, who, in giving the democratic minority representation on committees, will have but four names to use. It looks as though the democratic minority of the legislature would be worked pretty hard if their party obtains customary recognition.

General Master Workman Powderly, of the Knights of Labor, is a very conservative man, and in consequence has many enemies. He has been openly charged with having thrown over the great Southwestern strike when the strikers were on the verge of success; that his personal inactivity caused the defeat of the telegraphers; that he ordered off the strike at the stock yards in Chicago when the men had everything their own way, and that, in short, the executive officer of the Knights of Labor has grown rich by playing into the hands of the enemies of the order. Mr. Powderly invites a full investigation of these charges.

Colonel T. Egenton Hogg, of the Oregon Pacific, in an address to the citizens of Corvallis made mention of the fact that a report had been circulated to the effect that the present company would dispose of the road, and said: "Could such a thing occur, there are six other large companies ready and willing to take it out of our hands; but," he added, "we are not going to sell." He hinted, too, that when the Oregon Pacific does make connection with the point it is headed for eastward, there might be another through line.

H. B. Turner, one of the Eastern railroad men now visiting in Oregon as guests of the Oregon Pacific, in a speech before the citizens of Albany urged upon the people of Oregon to take active steps to secure the preservation of the great forests of the state. This is, indeed, a most important matter. During the past dry season forest fires have been unusually destructive. Large extents of timber land have been burned over, and a few years more will render valueless vast tracts of land that are now eagerly sought after by lumbermen. Neither the laws of the state nor self-interest of its citizens seem to be able to prevent these conflagrations. They are, in almost every instance, the result of carelessness or worse. Hunters and campers move on, leaving their fires burning. Sheepmen start a blaze after their flocks have passed, with the object of securing a fresh growth of feed on the cleared and fertilized ground for the next season. The fires spread beyond all control, and thousands and millions of dollars of damage is done.

Nothing so vividly shows the remarkable possibilities of the Northwest as a little table giving the population of North and South Dakota, Washington, Montana, Oregon and Pennsylvania. The figures are as follows:

	Estimated Population.	Area in Sqr Miles.
North Dakota	250,000	75,000
South Dakota	425,000	78,500
Washington	310,000	69,994
Montana	136,000	146,776
Oregon	325,000	95,274
Pennsylvania	5,000,000	45,086

The smallest new state, Washington, is half again as large as Pennsylvania, while the largest, Montana, is more than three times as large. The total estimated population of all the new states is a little over 1,000,000, which is probably not more than 20 per cent. of the population of the Keystone state, to be shown by the present census. Compared to Pennsylvania the whole territory of the Northwest is comparatively empty.

A peculiar case has come before the courts at Salem in which G. Roberts of Polk county, the owner of a horse, has been held in $400 bonds to answer before the grand jury on a charge of stealing the animal. It strayed from Mr. Roberts's farm, was taken up by the city marshal advertised and sold to the highest bidder, Robert Ford. Mr. Roberts found the horse and took it home with him. It seems as though a case so clear as this should be settled without an appeal to the courts.

Latest reports from the Santiam mines are very encouraging and development work is being pushed forward very rapidly. The shaft of the Albany Mining Company is down sixty feet and good prospects are ahead. The Golden City Mining Company are running a cross cut to their old tunnel and the stock holders assert that they have something rich. A new road will be built to these mines by private capital and the Santiam district may yet obtain a world wide fame.

The new woolen mill at Albany is one of the most substantial structures of the kind ever built in the Willamette valley. A stone foundation, solid brick walls, brick partitions, an iron roof all speak of permanency, and Albany has good reason to be proud of the enterprise of her citizens that secured its location there.

A building contractor at Spokane Falls was arrested a few days ago for leaving a dangerous hole unguarded on a public thoroughfare, and was compelled to pay a heavy fine for his negligence. This is an example that could be followed with advantage in all cities.

Great efforts have been exerted to make the fair, held this week at Baker City, a perfect success. The number and quality of the entries show the great interest that the people of the county take in the enterprise.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

The late Wilkie Collins seemed to care nothing for the opinions of critics, and never kept a scrap-book.

President Harrison's health has not improved this summer, but Mrs. Harrison is much stronger than she was in May.

Buffalo Bill and Rosa Bonheur have become great friends. The former is taking lessons in oils from the great artist. What will Mrs. Wm. T. Cody, out at North Platte, Nebraska, have to say about this?

Said Mr. Spurgeon recently: "I never have been ordained and never intend to be. When a church chooses a man to be its pastor that man is ordained, if God has called him and filled him with the holy spirit and power."

Balfour, who is called "the best-hated man in England," is still young. He was born in 1848 and went to parliament in 1874. He does not look like a strong man, either physically or mentally, but he has shown in an unpopular way that he is both.

Henry Russell, father of W. Clark Russell, the novelist, was once a resident of America. He has written many popular ballads. Among them are "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," "The British Grenadiers," and "A Life on the Ocean Wave." The latter has just been adopted as the particular march of the Royal Marines by order of the British Admiralty.

The queen regent of Spain is simple in her manners, and is slowly relaxing the rigid etiquette of the Spanish court. Formerly it was impossible to smoke before the queen. At a recent court dinner, however, she ordered cigars to be produced. Everybody was astonished, and no one seemed inclined to take the first step. The officer of state next the queen held the silver basket containing the cigars, but did not know what to do with them. Finally the queen took one, lighted it, and said: "Pass around the cigars, gentlemen."

The royal family of England is not walking well at present. The queen's knee-joint is still swollen and she cannot walk without a stick. The Prince of Wales still suffers from a varicose vein and limps perceptibly. An affection of the instep causes the Princess of Wales to limp a trifle. Prince Albert Victor, who may rule over England some day, recently met with an accident while stalking deer in Scotland. In leaping from one boulder to another he fell and sprained his ankle. He still goes about with his leg bandaged and walks lame. Royalty halts, so to speak.

Menelik II., the new king of Abyssinia, is the son of a beggar woman who took his father's fancy. He is almost coal black, short and dumpy. Unlike his uncle, Ras Dargne, and others among his chief advisers, he is very friendly to Europeans and wants to introduce their arts into his country. He has a remarkable fondness for machinery and implements of all sorts, and his greatest delight is to examine their mechanism. Explorers say he ruined about a dozen watches and alarm clocks, taking them apart and trying to put them together again. He became at last, however, quite a proficient watch tinker.

Something Interesting Promised.—D. C. Lounsbury, mentioned in the article in The Sunday Oregonian referring to Joe Holladay's flight to Victoria and the reason therefor, called at this office yesterday and said that he would make a statement in to-morrow's paper that would vindicate himself. He promised to give the public facts that would be of unusual interest.

It is learned from G. A. Steel & Co., that a large number of lots have recently been sold in Fulton Park, and that many new buildings will soon be erected in that vicinity. This is certainly a most desirable addition to Portland, and the completion of the electric road, with its low fares and quick transit, will at once bring it into the city, so far as values and convenience are concerned.

Will Be Thoroughly Equipped.—The news that Adjutant General J. C. Shofner had received notice that equipments have been shipped to finish out the 400 guns received under the Hermann bill, greatly pleases the First regiment. If they receive their quota they will be able to fully equip every company including the one lately organized at Oregon City.

Election of Officers.—At the meeting of the Congregation Ahavi Sholom yesterday, the following officers were elected: President, H. Danziger, for the fifth term; vice-president, S. H. Abrahams; secretary, M. Fisher; treasurer, H. Wolf; trustees, M. Rynke, I. Harris, I. Morris and I. Mitchell. Rev. Robert Abrahamson was re-elected rabbi.

W. J. Colville left Portland Sunday for the Sound for a few weeks. Damages Nominal.—Although the O. R. & N. Co. acted very liberally in that big invoice of cloaks for J. Selling & Co., it was found on examination that only a few garments which were on top in the cases were slightly wet. The big reduction applies to every cloak—new markets, plush jackets and children's cloaks. Sale begins today.

Pon Long Going to China.—Pon Long, the well known Chinese merchant, will leave with his family for Hong Kong on the Coloma. Pon Long expects to stay abroad four years. His Chinese friends have been tendering him a series of dinners since they learned of his contemplated departure.

Has Reached New York.—Judge Deady reached Chicago on Friday and writes that he felt as well as possible and was just as comfortable on the trip as he would have been at home. He was to arrive in New York last evening.

Installation Ball.—The installation of the officers of Multnomah lodge No. 1, O. D. H. S. will be be celebrated by a "Solennen Balle" at Turn hall, on the evening of Sunday, October 13.

COMMEMORATIVE SERVICES.

An Evening With Horatius Bonar at the First Presbyterian Church Last Night—An Appropriate Programme.

The chapel of the First Presbyterian church, corner Tenth and Alder streets, was crowded last evening to such an extent that chairs were required to accommodate those who could not find seats.

Commemorative services were held in this place of worship last evening in honor of Horatius Bonar, who is commonly known as the "poet of the church." An attractive musical programme arranged by Church Chorister Werschkul was very pleasantly received. After the organ voluntary, by Mrs. M. H. Holbrook, anthem by the choir, solo by Mrs. J. B. Wyatt, all of which were most excellently rendered, Rev. Arthur J. Brown delivered the memorial address.

He first gave a brief biographical sketch of Bonar, who was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, December 19, 1807; was educated in the high schools and university of that city, and was a pupil in the theology of Dr. Chalmers, the famous Scottish preacher. He was ordained to the ministry of the Presbyterian church in 1837 at the age of 19 years, and became pastor of the church of Kelso, on the Tweed, where he remained twenty-nine years. In 1866 he became pastor of the Chalmers Memorial church of Edinburgh, where he officiated until his death, July 31 of this year, at the age of 81 years.

As a preacher, said the speaker, Bonar was characterized by his spiritual depth and sweetness and was widely loved. But it was as a hymn writer that he was most widely known. He has been called the poet of the Presbyterian church. His hymns have found their way into many languages and have been sung by millions of all classes.

Most of his finest and most extensively adopted hymns were composed for his Sunday schools with no idea that they would be adopted into the hymnology of Christendom. He dropped his seeds of sacred song by the wayside and lo, what a golden harvest.

Mr. Brown next took up several of the representative hymns, which illustrated at once the variety and sweetness of the poet's power, after which he described the funeral services of this noted divine.

The following, which was the remaining portion of the evening's programme, was creditably rendered.

Hymn 40, "Upward Where the Stars are Burning," …… Bonar
Hymn 474, "I See a Man at God's Right Hand," …… Bonar
Prayer.
Offering.
Male quartette, "I Cannot Always Trace the Way," …… Dow
Messrs. Warren, Lamberson, Werschkul and Schuyler.
Hymn 810, "Calm Me, My God, and Keep Me Calm," …… Bonar
Solo, "Not a Sparrow Falleth," …… Abt
Miss G. Davey.
Hymn 874, "Thy Way, Not Mine, O Lord," …… Bonar
Responsive reading of the 91st Psalm.
Anthem, "Only Waiting," …… Straub
The Choir.
Hymn 1040, "Here, O My Lord, I See Thee Face to Face," …… Bonar
Hymn 1127, "This is Not My Place of Resting," …… Bonar
Quartette, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," ……
Miss Davey, Mrs. Wyatt, Messrs. Warren and Schuyler.
Hymn 1110, "Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping," …… Bonar

BRIEF MENTION.

The carpets for the new hotel, "The Portland," will be furnished by H. F. Gullixson & Co., 104 Third street.

Charlie will have to take a French dinner to-night. There is only one place to go and 'tis Drouilhat's, 90 First street.

Every visitor at the fair to-night should call at the exhibit of Hoyt & Co., and inspect their Weber piano and their matchless Mason & Hamlin organ. The large vocalion organ in their display is also worthy of close examination.

Do not buy a cheap piano when you can get the very best for the same money. H. Sinsheimer, the well-known music dealer at 214 First street, has just received an immense shipment of the famous Steinway & Son's and Chickering & Son's pianos—the best instruments in the world. He also carries the only high-grade organ—the Burdett. He is the only Portland music dealer who buys direct from the factories for cash only

POPULAR EDUCATION

Victor Hugo said that to create and pave the way for intelligence in any given generation it is necessary to educate the grandmothers True systems of education must provide not alone for the immediate present, but for the future as well The greatest thinkers of the present age are agreed that popular education is the safeguard of our free institutions. There are some, however, who advance an opinion that the poor are better conditioned without learning, or at least higher education. The Chicago Herald thinks that the American youth is largely over educated, and quotes the opinion of a learned German professor to strengthen its position The name of this foreign scholar is not given, but he states that a college and professional education are not likely to aid any, except young men of genius, to obtain a living, and that in Germany "there are more preachers than pulpits more teachers than schools, and more doctors and lawyers than can build up a paying practice"

The minister of instruction in Russia last year sent out a circular, under the sanction of the government to universities, colleges and the high schools, instructing them not receive as students 'the sons of peddlers, small traders, mechanics and laborers unless they displayed remarkable talent' To use an example such as this to prove that the poor should be debarred from the privileges of education is but begging the question. In Russia this order was for political purposes. It had in view the suppression of popular will, and the result may be found ere long in another attempt to end the czar's existence by dynamite

There is a voice against popular education nearer home that deserves passing attention In the Forum for October the Rev Dr. Hendricks of New York, said "It deserves serious consideration whether our popular education as now conducted does not operate to make the children of the poor dissatisfied with their lot, contemptuous of manual labor and averse to the pursuits in which they are most needed and would be the most happy" This is no discovery, as one learned writer observes. It is simply an expansion of the old declaration that "where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise.'

Civilization and the real happiness of men are not advanced by leaving them in that stagnant pool of low contentment based on ignorance, but by discontent with themselves and their conditions, and a consequent determination to rise out of them that is developed from intelligence arising from knowledge and education. It is proved beyond all doubt that the condition of the poorer classes in the United States and by these are meant tradesmen, artisans and craftsmen, is better than that of similar classes in any other country, and it is to our system of universal education that this state of affairs is due. Education is valuable and proves itself so to the humblest workman in the lowest trade among all our varied industries The better fitted mentally a man is in any occupation may be the greater are his chances to improve his condition and uplift his life. All men and women are not educating themselves to become preachers, doctors, lawyers or teachers, the mills, mines, foundries, railroads and factories are using hundreds of thousands of young men and women who are not lowered by callings formerly not so well thought of but who elevate even the humblest trade or business by their young enthusiasm and moral bravery.

It cannot be denied that many abuses have been felt in our public educational system There have been mistakes made and false economy used in many of the states, especially in the South, where in some of the districts the public schools are open but a few months of the year Salaries are not large enough always everywhere to induce the best and most capable service, but all those faults are gradually being eradicated, courses in universities, colleges, high and primary schools are being improved and expanded to meet the highest needs of the people Industrial education occupies the intelligent attention and consideration of our best thinkers and educators and every phase of American life and work feels the impetus We dare not seek to obstruct education, either primary, normal or collegiate. It is the safety of the country. It gives us recruits to the army of intelligence. It drives religious hatred and fanaticism from the hearts of men. It will solve all questions of right and might, and instead of creating unrest among the poor it will teach them that labor and toil is highest honor, and independence the highest jewel in manhood's crown.

TWO HOME PICTURES.

And It All Depends on How Papa Comes Home at Night.

Look on this picture and then on that "Father is coming!" and the little round faces grow long, merry voices are hushed, toys are thrust into the cupboard, mamma glances nervously at the door, baby is bribed with a lump of sugar to keep the peace Father's business face relaxes not a muscle, the little group huddle like timid sheep in a corner Tea is dispatched in silence as though speaking were prohibited. The children creep like culprits to bed, marveling that baby dares crow so loud, now that 'father has come!"

'Father is coming!' Bright eyes sparkle with joy tiny faces dance with glee eager faces press against the window panes and a bevy of rosy lips claim kisses at the door Picture books he lays on the table, and tops, balls dolls and kites are discussed Little busy lays her soft cheek against the paternal whiskers with the most careless abandon, Charley gets a love pat for his medal, mamma's face grows radiant, the evening paper is read aloud, and tea and toast and time vanish with celerity, for jubilee has arrived, and "father has come."

Hints for Baldheaded Women.

Good Housekeeping

Now, as to the treatment for incipient baldness, thin spots, and so forth This is what an eminent physician said to a gentleman who consulted him for the first named trouble

'Have you been accustomed to wash your head in soapy water?" asked the doctor

'Yes every morning," was the reply

"Well that is the cause of this bald place, stop washing and begin brushing your hair Use a bristle brush, and brush for fifteen minutes every morning and night You may not notice any improvement for a year, perhaps not for two but be assured you will have a fine crop of hair and never grow bald if you pursue this course"

As fifteen minutes seems a long while vigorously moving a hair brush hither and thither over the surface of your head it would be well to inveigle one's friends into assisting wouldn't it?

If the hair is falling out remember that it is owing to the unhealthy condition of the scalp First, cut off about two inches of the hair next wash in clear, cold salt water rubbing dry with a crash towel, then begin the fifteen minutes brushing process, and in a few weeks you will see the tiny spires of new hair coming all over your head Beware of being tempted to the use of any nostrum whatsoever no matter how plausible the advertisement thereof, all are more or less injurious—generally more, as you will find out to your sorrow if you begin the use of them

HUNTING BONES IN OREGON.

Some Experiences Gathered by the Princeton College Expedition.

The Fossil Hunters Were Occasionally Hunted by Red Ants and Rattlesnakes—A Tenderfoot's General Impressions

One of the members of the Princeton college expedition engaged in hunting fossils in the John Day valley, Oregon, contributes the following account of his experiences to the New York Tribune

The Princeton university scientific expedition has returned from its three months' ransacking of old bones in Oregon Of course you know what the Princeton university scientific expedition is? The ranchers and rangers in Oregon know it well enough In order that there may be no doubt about it I will tell you It has been one of the original features at Princeton to send out expeditions composed of students and professors to the 'Bad Lands' and other regions of the West during the summer vacations to investigate the geological formations and gather material among the fossil remains, for scientific study and research The first expedition was sent out in 1877 That of this year was the seventh Professor W B Scott, who has the chair of geology, was with the first two expeditions and has had charge of the last five which went out in the years '82 '84, '85 '86 and '89 respectively These parties explored pretty extensively in Colorado, Nebraska, Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, and all of the expeditions except that of 1884 have met with a very gratifying degree of success, as a result of which the museum at Princeton contains one of the most important collections of American fossil mammals in existence

This year we went to the extensive exposures of the 'John Day" formation in Oregon This is a separate horizon of the Miocene period, which contains a large series of animals not to be found elsewhere. These beds were deposited in an ancient fresh water lake which must have been in the neighborhood of active volcanoes, as appears from the quantity of ashes which occur in them

ROUGHING IT

At Baker City Oregon, we found our guide and bought our four horse team to carry baggage and a horse for each of us at $30 a horse. This done, we started off on our 150 miles' ride with a party of fifteen, including teamsters and guides

As you may imagine a six-days ride over rough mountain roads, oftentimes in the broiling sun, with nights spent in the open air, with the hard ground or a bed, was a pretty violent change of habit for a lot of college boys But we stood it well Those who were strong grew stronger, those who were delicate after the first shock grew vigorous The Oregon soil when slept on for the first time makes your bones a little sore, but one soon gets used to it We "turned in" at night two and two Each of us had two blankets and a waterproof spread. Combining these, two of us would bunk together But one does not always lie still like a log on the hard ground, and one morning two of us woke up and found ourselves separated each with his own complement of blankets rolled around him We carried a tent with us, but it was not used until we came to permanent camp and then only for protection to our stores We invariably lay down for the night's rest under the open sky or beneath the shade of a tree In crossing the Blue mountains we found it decidedly cold after sunset, and woke up more than once with frost in our hair and an inch of ice in our water-pails

AN OLD CHESTNUT

We had already got away from white shirts and polished boots We had become accustomed to being accosted as 'Cully," and seeing men with a pistol in each side of the belt and a knife in the boot. The brakeman on one of the cars had given us a vivid idea of life in the West with the following anecdote One day the conductor on a train demanded a ticket from a cowboy The cowboy instantly drew his cocked pistol and pointed it at the conductor saying 'That's my ticket' The conductor discreetly passed along and went into the next car There he borrowed a rifle from a passenger and returning approached the cowboy from the rear On getting close to him, he put the cold steel of his shooting iron against the cowboy's head and, with his finger on the trigger said pleasantly 'Now, I'm ready to punch that ticket" The cowboy surrendered good naturedly, paid his fare, and he and the conductor were ever after the fastest friends The shortest route to the heart of one of these sons of the desert is to "get the drop on him"

THE FOSSILS FOUND

But rough as the people seemed to us while traveling on the railway train, we soon found after leaving Baker City that we were in for the hardest kind of life We did not press immediately to the John Day river but encamped, after six days riding, at Cotton Wood creek, about three miles from where it empties into the north fork of the John Day river Here we soon found enough fossils to make the stop a valuable one A rhinoceros's head and the hind legs of a three toed horse were among the discoveries The rim rock in this country is all of volcanic origin, and the hills and mountains are made of layers of this material They are consequently rugged and barren Below these is a sedimentary rock varying in color from white to red and very dirty hard in some places and soft in others, which were once the bottom and shores of the great lakes which covered this district before the lava outbursts took place The bones of the animals which lived and died hereabouts were buried in this rock which formed after the lakes were dried up, and were there preserved In later times the streams, by continual wearing, have cut down through the lava under which the bones were so securely sealed up and which in the course of ages had become petrified, and through the rock and have left precipitous cliffs standing of from 10 to 200 feet in hight The fossils are imbedded in this rock, and as the cliffs are eroded edges of bones protrude and it is necessary to climb about on the face of the precipice and hunt for these little excrescences When one is found the whole skeleton, or as much of it as can be secured, has to be dug out with the greatest care so as not to break it, as it is very fragile The work is severe The sun is so hot that often times we had to lie by during the hours about noon It is hazardous too, for it was no uncommon thing to crawl up the side of an almost perpendicular rock using the slightest irregularities in the surface for rungs in our ladder, and on reaching a dizzy height to be unable to retrace our steps and be obliged to scale the whole cliff to the top.

COMPARATIVE CLEANLINESS

It was delicious, after a fatiguing day's work, which left us hot and dusty, to take a refreshing plunge in the river, and get cool and clean again. When I say clean, I mean comparatively clean One can't be absolutely clean as to wearing apparel when he has to wash his own clothes We all made our debut in the laundry line during this trip I found that to wash clothes conveniently I had to get altogether into the brook myself I can't plume myself overmuch on my first attempt I lost one sock in the mud and tore the other one to pieces on the rocks As for the rest of the things, the most that you could say for them was that they were wet

"Long Creek," one of our stopping places is a typical Central Oregon village. As the proprietor of a hovel they call a hotel put it to me 'It is one of the toughest little towns I ever seed" A squib in the Long Creek Eagle, which I saw, gave the tone of the public sentiment quite well It ran something like this 'It is now four days since the great Sullivan Kilrain fight, and still we are unable to print an account of the battle Our readers are naturally disappointed but we hope fellow-citizens, that this deprivation will spur you up to get a telegraph line started so that we shall not have to keep the whole community in suspense when the next momentous event transpires"

FOSSILS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

At length we reached a place called 'The Cove" on the John Day river—our permanent camp The special interest which attaches to the John Day fossils is due to the fact that so many of them are "missing links" in the chain of descent, and are thus particularly important from the point of view of evolution Here we found quantities of the primitive ancestors of the horse, rhinoceros, camel, deer, ox, dog, weasel, rabbit, squirrel, etc., not to mention a great many forms which have died out entirely, leaving no successors behind them.

It is known in scientific circles that Professor W B Scott and Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn of the chair of comparative anatomy in Princeton University, have been engaged for several years in together getting up a book on 'The American Fossil Mammalia, for which they have been making studies in Europe and this country This book the painstaking work of these two industrious and gifted experts profusely illustrated by an artist brought to this country from Europe for this purpose as peculiarly fitted for the service will probably be published in the course of a year It is to the collecting of necessary and heretofore undiscovered data for this learned work that these later expeditions have been made to contribute and it may well be imagined that the researches made in the John Day region have been most interesting to Professor Scott on this account

ANTS AND SNAKES.

At "The Cove" we were about twenty five miles from Dayville the nearest postoffice making about fifty miles there and back to get our mails We took turns in going two and twos. We made our camp on the side of a little knoll Our heads were on a considerable slant, so that at first we kept to tobogganing down it all night and in the morning our heads were covered over with our blankets and our feet sticking out—two feet in the dirt I can't call it grass with any regard for truth The atmosphere was so dry that we had neither dew nor rain We had all the phenomena of thunderstorms without a drop of water Never let woodsmen tell tales of mosquitoes or black flies Those who have met the red ant on familiar terms know what biting is We made our beds on a nest of them one night—a night the hideousness of which will never be forgotten No singing insects you are accustomed to can begin to play an even game with red ants A fairly vigorous red ant of mature age can tie his right proboscis behind him and give the heaviest odds to a mosquito horse fly or even a spider, and whitewash him Then we had rattle snakes, too We killed at least a hundred, and even then the supply seemed as great as before We got so that we didn't mind a rattlesnake more than we would a mouse at home We drew the line, however at sleeping with them One of our number felt something wriggling under the blanket on which he was trying to sleep one night and on examination found that it was a rattlesnake He declined to have him as a bedfellow and Mr Rattlesnake had to retire These snakes are of course dangerous, but the fatality of their bite is exaggerated A man is sometimes made sick by the poison It is only severe bites that kill The boots and leggings that we wore were a protection besides, the rattlesnake always coils and rattles before striking and does not run after you They can be killed of course in various ways among others by whipping them with a strong whip called a quirk in the Western wilds

CAMP LIFE

Within a hundred feet of our camp at "The Cove" was a clear spring of ice cold water Tall pines were about us and balsam boughs were easily obtainable for beds But after a trial of these we preferred our accustomed mattrass, mother earth Of course we had to put up with rough fare Our teamster Brown, cooked for us, and when he was away we took our turns Some of us have become famous at 'flap jacks" The out-of door life gave us all that best of sauces a good appetite which could not be even dulled by seeing one of the party washing his clothes in the boiling pot and another using the frying pan in the light of a wash basin

One has to learn the language of the country wherever he goes In Oregon they have a patois of their own For example Instead of saying, 'I am going over to that farm to put my horses into the stable," they say 'I am going to drive my cayuses over to that ranch and herd them into the corral' Speaking of herding, every morning two of us had to go out and bring in our beasts from where they were feeding We "hobbled" them with rings of leather on their fore feet connected by a chain and let them loose at night. In the morning, when we caught them we had great sport driving them in at full speed But our tales were as nothing as to what we saw at 'Buckaroo' camp some distance from 'The Cove" This is a horse grazing country There are no fences and no means of confining the animals But a horse will not wander outside of a certain area The range in question was about fifty miles square So the horses of the various owners are turned loose They are branded for recognition At certain times the ringers have what is called

A ROUND UP

It was one of these that we attended The horse rangers go out and drive in the horses to the corral—an enclosed place perhaps 200 feet in diameter with high round sides made to receive the shock of hundreds of frightened wild horses plunging against them The lasso (called out there a lass) is freely used The skill of these men at throwing the 'lass' is remarkable A crack thrower can put his rope around the head of any particular leg of a horse at will When the drove consisting of hundreds of wild horses has been got together they drive them to the corral at a full gallop It is an inspiriting sight One man rides ahead The horses follow A man rides on each side to whip them in and a fourth rides behind It is a wild scene when they come suddenly upon the entrance of the corral When once inside an interesting process takes place The colts are caught to be branded The "lass" is thrown by one man over the horse's head and another, by his companion, around one of the hind feet There is a jerk and down goes the colt on his side where he is firmly held while the hot iron is applied We spent a couple of days with the rough fellows who had charge of this work eating from the same vessels with them and singing songs around the monster camp fire The place was Buckhorn Gulch, at the source of Squaw creek It was enough to awake an appetite in the most dyspeptic to see the meat roasting on our spits of green wood and the bread baking in the frying pans

OPEN HOSPITALITY

Two of our party got stranded on the rough road to Dayville late at night The horses were worn out and it was impossible to push on But one spot is as comfortable as another when you sleep on the ground so these fellows were quite royally treated at the ranch of one Bill Day, who gave them splendid accommodations under a hay stack He treated the boys most hospitably and would take nothing for it. There are warm hearts under the jackets of some of these uncouth ranchers They will feed your horses and shower all they have upon you although they have never seen you before and expect nothing for it in return except the friendly disposition to do the same for them some day We came to the conclusion that tough as they are, they possess good qualities which people in our Eastern cities lack They have an exaggerated form of speech, to which one becomes accustomed and which is sometimes entertaining Those who have lived in the far West remember the remark of the famous Wyoming frontiersman, when asked how long he had lived here 'Young feller' said he, do you see that thar butte (mountain) When I come here fust it were a hole in the ground"

Dayville consists of six unpainted houses, including a barn a hencoop, and a saloon, with so-called hotel annexed The room we had to sit in was a combination of grocery store grog hole and parlor. Our companions were a stage driver a retired sheep herder a cowboy and the hotel proprietor, and a more interesting company for the time being would be hard to find When we broke camp at 'The Cove' we had about a couple of tons of bones These were taken carefully, by wagon to Dayville, and there packed for shipment to Princeton Our ride back to Baker City was one of the most trying six days journeys imaginable The alkali dust was so thick and so light that it filled the air and made it almost solid It permeated the lungs and nostrils and hair and clothing A "rockier," more dilapidated, dirtier looking crowd than ours as we entered Baker City could not be picked up in the slums of New York The populace ran out to see us We could hear them crying, 'Hear they come!' It was anything but a triumphal entry Yet we did not come in by a rear alley and sneak up to the back door of the hotel, but boldly walked up to the front door by the main street. (Note—There was no other way to get there) The barber, the bath tub and our long stored-up fashionable clothes were soon resorted to, and we emerged a party of Eastern swells—compared with our former condition.

IN SOUTHERN OREGON.

Oakland, Douglas County, and the Rich Tributary Country.

The Mines of Cement, Freestone and Quicksilver—How They Have Been Developed by Courageous Private Enterprise

PART III

After finishing Riddle, I properly ought to speak of the neighboring town and district of Canyonville I am however, under engagement to Mr Thomas of that town, to go with him into the mountains to examine the mines From this I shall obtain more general information of the district than I possess at present and so leave it for a future occasion

The next place to be noticed is the town of

OAKLAND

And the business interests it represents It is the second largest town in the county beautifully situated on the Calapooia river The town is well laid out is well built up and contains about 400 people All the leading business occupations and trades are well represented with the religious and fraternal elements particularly so, there being six church organizations and three lodges—Masons Odd Fellows and Workmen Each has a large roll of members The hotels are good especially the principal one The Depot established in 18[illegible] at which the accommodations and terms are all that can be asked

The best feature of Oakland is the academy under the management of Professor Rand While the intellectual training of this institution is comprehensive and exact the physical training is not neglected The academy is justly popular with the public

The citizens of Oakland assume a high standard of social morality and vigorously enforce prohibition As in other places it never the less is not stop tippling for whisky can be had at all times by the glass or bottle and when hunted for in earnest can be found by the barrel I saw the latter myself Of all social dangers to the average man that of being forced into 'private tippling' is the worst This exists in Oakland as elsewhere, and is the strongest argument against prohibition At 9 o'clock at night there is not a light or a human being to be seen on the streets So the spare cash which these men spend in other places is spent elsewhere It was the first time in my life that I came in direct contact with prohibition Morally I regard it as a failure, and I am not a regular drinking man either I firmly think man cannot be made temperate any more than religious by compulsion

The agricultural surroundings of Oakland are equal in richness and extent to those of any section in the county and the town ought certainly to show a greater activity in its daily life Down the Calapooia river all the way to the coast range of mountains, the land is as rich and the country as beautiful as nature can well make them while the annual yield in cereals vegetables hay and fruits is fully up to the high standard of the county at large The same may be said of the eastern surroundings through Camas prairie, to the mineral region for a distance of twenty miles the only difference being that along the Calapooia river in places the scenery is more mountainous and rugged than generally on the Umpqua Farms in the Camas prairie district sell as high as $15 000 The general produce of this section is best proved by the amount of shipments from the local depot for the year ending July 31 1889

	Pounds
Wool	[illegible] 000
Cement rock	[illegible] 000
Wheat	[illegible]
Cattle	[illegible] 000
Merchandise	79 [illegible]
Horses	4[illegible] 000
Sheep	6 000
Oats	4 481
Hogs	40 000
Drain tiles	4[illegible] 000
Bricks	140 000

or 2,01[illegible] pounds altogether The amount of live stock takes precedence because it forms a prominent industry in the district The business is chiefly in the hands of Mr James Chenoweth and Mr J B Beckley Last year there were also shipped from the Oakland depot $7 000 worth of poultry and eggs That is good as far as it goes But as San Francisco pays Illinois and Missouri $1 000 000 a year for eggs alone a better business in eggs can be done if the people of Southern Oregon choose to combine and rescue it from the Eastern states mentioned

THE MINES

So far as I know, consist of cement freestone and quicksilver all of which separately or together when thoroughly worked are capable of yielding an immense revenue To myself it was a surprise to see such a large amount of 'cement rock among the shipments While in Oakland I was informed that the local mine of this kind was in the hands of a Portland company who kept it idle through the terms of a silly contract made by the owner There are about 40 000 barrels of foreign cement used in Portland every year At $4 a barrel the market price it means $160 000 saved to the state if our own cement were used There is not much difference I understand in the character of the Oregon and English cement Not enough at least to exclude our home product from our home market Only somebody [illegible] has a corner on the foreign article in Portland and so as usual Oregon's wealth must be sacrificed to the selfish cupidity of man

FREESTONE

In a conversation with Mr Stearns, father of our local judge I learned his product, although of an excellent character was also in abeyance I have been told in Portland, that the Oakland rock softens and chips when exposed to the atmosphere for any length of time at least so a contractor asserted a few days since I cannot accept any such statement unless it is proved the atmosphere of Portland is a thousand times more corroding than the atmosphere of Roseburg the same stone adorns the store of Sol Abraham, and after being exposed for several years to the atmosphere, I failed myself to find a single soft spot, a chip, a scale or an iron spot on the whole front though I examined it keenly for that purpose The Oakland rock works up easily, accepts an elegant finish and for the large brick buildings now going up in Portland would be a thousand times better for ornamentation than the corrugated iron so much in vogue Has anybody got a corner on Washington territory rock that once more Oregon must be sacrificed? It seems so

QUICKSILVER MINES

The principal of these is the Bonanza about ten miles east of the town The property was discovered years ago by Messrs Ray Tun and Kelly who as usual simply prospected on the main body of surface ore though enough so to show it existed in great quantity and richness. Fortunately for the state and himself the property drifted into the possession of Mr James Chenoweth, one of the brightest and most enterprising men in the country and withal a most liberal man in spending money for public good, who as very rightly he should he sees a chance to make money by his liberality So in this case by an expenditure of $40,000 in developing the mine and building furnaces for the reduction of the ore he has secured a life time property that will yield immense wealth and earned the honor of being the first man who made Oregon like California a quicksilver producing country in quantity How I admire such men as Mr Chenoweth for their courage enterprise and intelligence. It is such men who prove that mining when judiciously undertaken and systematically pursued, oftener leads to wealth than ruin His example, in this case cannot fail to have a beneficial influence on the whole country If the owners of the nickel mine at Riddle would follow the example of the owners of marble at Roseburg and quicksilver at Oakland then Douglas county would have the honor of producing those three indispensable articles for all time in quantity What a difference there is sometimes in public enterprise

Let us look into this matter a little closer for it supplies profitable reading During the last twelve months Mr Pond mayor of San Francisco, and his associate Mr Gage a capitalist of that city have been negotiating for a half interest in the Bonanza quicksilver mine at Oakland, and the Todd quicksilver mine, twelve miles to the northeast From some cause I do not know and didn't inquire into the consummation of the purchase did not mature until the 15th of last August when the San Francisco parties had to make up their minds either to purchase or retire. I believe this is a correct statement of the matter In the mean time what did Mr Chenoweth do? To help the negotiations along he developed the property under his control the Bonanza thoroughly, from end to end to the depth of 300 feet and showed at every point an immense body of fine ore almost equal within the range of development to the surface ore in the celebrated quicksilver mine the New Almaden of California Then on the prospect before him, he engaged Mr Kimball a California mining expert in charge of the Todd property mentioned to build a range of furnaces with all necessary appointments and commenced smelting on his own account, indifferent, to a certain extent whether the San Francisco parties purchased or not To reach this condition, the total expenditure was $70 000 all the more creditable to Mr Chenoweth as no other man or company of men in this county would have spent $2000 or perhaps $10 for the same purpose at the same risk.

THE RESULT

Of this enterprise and liberality has been most fortunate for Mr Chenoweth himself the county and the state for the mine has proved itself rich, and will produce largely for fifty years at least. In the course of my rambles I reached the mine on the first day of the clean up and stayed until the last, so I personally know the details of that event Nothing more need be said here than that the yield was perfectly satisfactory to the parties concerned, and by a recent letter from Mr Chenoweth I learn the San Francisco men now own a half interest in the Bonanza and I suppose, according to the original arrangement a half interest in the Todd property also

All this means an introduction of sufficient capital and enterprise to make the property complete in every respect for I freely admit California men will spend money without stint to perfect their mining properties Indeed I may add, no men in any country are more liberal or sagacious in this direction In fact, this spirit has already been displayed A contract has been let for 300 000 bricks to build a fine ore furnace in addition to those already built The want of this furnace showed itself clearly in the first clean up Fine or crushed up ore in quicksilver is always the richest, but it could not be reduced into metal for want of a proper furnace and the difference in this yield, no doubt, amounted to several flasks of metal At the next clean up the work will be perfect and the reputation of the state thereby advanced another step higher in the production of valuable metals. A few words now about

THE TODD MINE

Fourteen miles northeast of the Bonanza and only seven from the Yoncalla station of the O & C R R. which now becomes additionally valuable The property contains 240 acres abundantly supplied with wood and water for all purposes. The ore is thirty five feet wide Surface developments for 1500 feet show an unbroken continuity of ore in that direction all the way At this mine the ore can be worked at a cost not exceeding 80 cents a ton Reduction works of improved methods, capable of working forty tons a day, already exist at the mine and were erected by Mr Kimball, already spoken of. Nine ore furnaces will now be added to the coarse ore furnaces existing, and ten of both kinds will produce 100 000 pounds of silver per year The mine has been worked for years on a small scale but always with satisfactory results. This increased activity in the Oregon mines of this kind is owing to two causes—the gradual decrease of quicksilver in California and the activity among English capitalists to purchase quicksilver properties. So for the first in the history of Oregon the production of quicksilver on a large scale is permanently established. The operations at the mines mentioned have excited a desirable spirit of prospecting in all directions but especially to the north Much excitement is said to exist at Cole's valley from discoveries made there recently and now according to the Drain Echo, Sec 75 valley, still further north, is the scene of further important discoveries Let us be thankful the spirit of progress is reviving among us In the right direction Like liberty, progress is often crushed to the earth by the cupidity and treachery of man It is time some neighboring place to spring up as an example more brightly than ever How we will welcome this spirit in Oregon when it comes to us in its fullness as it came years ago to the people of California and made that state what it is

HUGH HARNETT

VOTE AND COMMENT

W. L. Jones, formerly editor of the Hillsboro Independent has established the Morning Leader at Port Townsend The new paper is an eight-page daily typographically neat in appearance In its greeting to the public the editor states that the Morning Leader is not a political paper We wish the Morning Leader an abundant success for it looks like it has come into the field to stay

There are abundant evidences at all points in the Willamette valley of an era of improvement and substantial growth Every town seems to enjoy business and prosperity and the country around it is putting on new dress in the way of improvement of buildings and fences Orchards are being planted and brush patches are being cleared and will be brought into cultivation next season

W H. Baber of Junction City, recently lost a purse containing sixty dollars in greenbacks and some valuable papers. He advertised for it and stated that if the finder would return the purse and papers to him he could keep the greenbacks The greenbacks were in an envelope addressed to Mr Baber at Junction The other day he received the purse and papers in the same envelope but the finder had kept the greenbacks.

There are a number of formal resignations on file in the departments at Washington from democratic federal office holders in Oregon but the Oregon delegation seems unable to agree upon their successors for some reason that does not appear clear to an ordinary observer The reason for failure to appoint where terms have not expired is clear enough, provided the present occupant has proved faithful to his trust.

The St Helens Mist says Timber lands in the lower part of Columbia county, Oregon that could recently have been bought from the government for $2.50 per acre are now being sold at from $5 to $10 per acre and many of the owners will not sell for that This shows to what figures good timber land in Columbia county is reaching and those that have been fortunate enough to secure a piece have an investment that beats stock in a bank

With the present week's issue, the Eugene Register enters upon the sixth year of its existence It is a bright newsy local paper, and well represents the growth prosperity and activity of the charming town where it is published. It is not given to sensations but mirrors the events that make up the life of the citizens of Eugene That there is a demand for newspapers in that city is seen in the presence of three good weeklies, all well supported

The public schools of Eugene show an increase of over 25 per cent over last year The attendance last year at the close of the first month was 402. This year at the beginning of the third week the attendance was [illegible] seventy six At the close of the month there will show an increase of at least 30 per cent. This shows that the town has grown very rapidly the past year and we doubt if any city in the valley can show a better increase.

Hon W T Forrest, who was elected by the republicans of Washington as state land commissioner is a resident of Lewis county and received the warm indorsement of his neighbors for his well known honesty integrity of purpose and the thoroughness of his business methods The office which he holds is one of great importance to the people because under its control will be the management and sale of the school and tide lands of the state

The Washington hop crop is now nearly all harvested The yield has not come up to expectations, and there will be less than 40,000 bales Some yards have not been picked because of the prevailing depression arising from the absence of an early demand Oregon will have no more than two thirds or at best, three fourths that of last year so instead of a marked increase in the output of the two districts, as compared with the crop of 1888, there will be a lessened supply

Since the discovery of large deposits of coal in Douglas county there has been a good deal of prospecting in Lane county, with results that prove its presence in a large district to the west of Eugene The evidences are numerous to establish this fact but the depth and quality of the deposit are not yet fully known Prolific as Oregon has been known to be in natural resources they cannot be fully appreciated until they are brought to light by development. That work is just beginning

In remarking about the number of loads of merchandise that have been hauled over the mountains from Eugene to Crook country, the editor of the Prineville News, says the amount would be doubled if the proprietors of the McKenzie wagon road would throw the rocks out of it and put the road in good condition for travel The Eugene Register hopes that before another year the road will be put in first class condition for travel, for it means several thousand dollars to Eugene every year

The lighthouse at Florence for which an appropriation of $80 000 was made by congress, was located last week upon Heceta Head, by the engineers having that work in charge. Congressman Hermann states that the plans and specifications are ready and the work of building will begin in the spring under a policy of securing all labor and material from the immediate vicinity as far as possible This will give an impetus to the industries of that region, and affords a sure guarantee that other and greater improvements will soon follow

In Salem there resides a man who likes to smoke but whose taste does not run in tobacco In its stead he smokes hops. He fills his pipe with the rodent blossom of the hop vine, and smokes his pipe in peace The flavor of the hop is said to be not bad The smoke has a peculiar aroma which is not altogether distasteful What special virtue there is in the hop as a smoker the Salem Statesman which records the above facts, is not prepared to state, but the gentleman mentioned has smoked them for years and seems to enjoy it

Seven cents a pound for hops is an offer that is not calculated to make growers who have paid as high as 50 cents a box for picking, smile yet that is what is being offered by buyers in Lane county at the present time George Hubbard, a buyer of Eugene states that there is even no demand for them at that price He also claims that many hops in the Willamette valley were picked too green and are greatly damaged on that account If such is the case many growers will suffer heavy losses Seven cents a pound will barely cover the expense of getting hops ready for market

A squaw on the Warm Springs reservation set a large steel trap for a bothersome coyote On approaching the trap the next morning armed with a hatchet she was pounced upon by the infuriated animal fastened as he was in the jaws of the trap He sprang at her face and sank his teeth in her cheek She caught the brute by the throat and belabored him with the hatchet until he loosed his cruel hold then she beat out his life with her formidable weapon. Her face was frightfully bitten and at last accounts was much swollen but the doctor who cared for the wound thinks the dusky woman will get well.

BAPTISTS IN COUNCIL.

Convention for Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho.

ELLENSBURGH, Oct. 3, 1889.

The Baptist Convention for Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho met in this city with Rev. G. N. Annes in the chair. After devotional services, conducted by Rev. N. Allyn, pastor of Ellensburgh church, the following permanent officers were elected: President, Rev. J. C. Baker, Colfax, Wn.; Rev. E. G. O. Groat, of Garfield, vice president; Rev. J. H. Beaven, Walla Walla, secretary.

The afternoon session was devoted to general miscellaneous business.

Rev. J. C. Baker, general agent for Colfax college, preached the introductory sermon, founded on I Cor. iii:10, on "Foundation Building," a masterly treatise upon missionary, educational and Sunday school work, building upon Christ as the chief corner stone by wise master hands.

The convention will continue over Sunday, October 6, during which time the following topics will be discussed and addresses delivered:

"General Missionary Work," by Rev. [illegible], Spokane Falls.

"Home Mission Field," by Rev. E. G. O. Groat, Garfield.

"What our churches owe the American Baptist Home Mission Society," by Rev. [illegible], Portland.

"Successful Mission Work," by Rev J. H. Beaven, Walla Walla.

"Colfax College," by Rev. J. C. Baker.

"College Endowments," by Rev. E. T. [illegible].

"Church and College Relations," by Rev. [illegible], Seattle.

"Importance of Educational Work," by Rev. L. B. Banks, Tacoma.

"Sunday School Work," by Rev. E. G. Wheeler, Portland, Oregon.

"Publications," by Rev. A. D. McMicheal.

"[illegible] Work," by Rev. May C. Jones, Spokane Falls.

The following are among the visitors in attendance upon the convention: Rev. [illegible] J. Burchett, Portland, Or., general agent Home Missionary Society, Rev. S. P. Davis, Portland, Or., editor Pacific Baptist; Rev. L. Wood, Missoula, Mont., editor Rocky Mountaineer; Rev. E. G. Wheeler, Portland, Or., general agent of the American Baptist Publication for the North Pacific coast; Miss Emma L. Miller, Chicago, representing the Women's Home Mission work.

The meetings have been well attended by delegates from the field covered by the convention, and the citizens of Ellensburgh have accorded a most royal reception in their many beautiful homes, these large hearted people of "future capitol belief" having entertained the annual assemblies of Masons, Odd Fellows, Methodists, Presbyterians and Baptists this year, and yet there is room. Certainly they are a "capital folk" and justly deserving of all claims for their beautiful city.

OREGON.

Farmers are beginning their fall plowing.

The Corvallis public schools have about 250 pupils.

There are nine scholars in the state school for the blind.

The Salem fruit evaporator now consumes 300 bushels of apples daily.

William Neis, one of the most extensive hop-growers in the Willamette valley, employed 300 pickers this season and used eight dry-houses.

The O. & C. road has put several extra coaches on the Eugene express to accommodate the crowds attending the Industrial exposition, Portland.

The Lane county jail has only one occupant awaiting the meeting of the circuit court. He is the man Putman, charged with mailing obscene letters.

Mrs. Ware and her family, of Eugene, were pitched out of a buggy by the horse running away. Frank Ware suffered a sprained ankle, but all the others escaped uninjured.

The Presbytery of Oregon meets in semi-annual session next Tuesday at East Portland. The synod of the Columbia, including the Presbyterian churches in Alaska, Washington, Northern Idaho and Oregon, will also hold their annual meeting, beginning Thursday week, at Pendleton.

F. I. Reed and W. S. Hazelton, experienced sawmill men from Oakland, Cal., arrived in Eugene last week. They immediately left for the Siuslaw country and will look over the ground at Glenada with a view to start a large sawmill there. The fine timber in that region is attracting a great many of that kind of men.

Eugene Register: There arrived on Monday night's train a car containing a whole farming outfit and family direct from the East. They brought horses, chickens and everything in the shape of household goods. They evidently thought they were coming to a wilderness and supposed they could not buy such things here.

Miss Piberin, the girl who was so badly burned at Brown's hopyard, near Eugene, a few weeks ago, died from the effects of her injuries. She was buried the next day in the cemetery across the river. The family resides on the line of the Oregon Pacific road, between Corvallis and Yaquina, but did not have the means to take the body there for burial.

IDAHO.

The assessment roll of Owyhee county will foot up over $1,000,000.

William Bedell was sentenced at Boise City last Saturday to twenty-five years in the penitentiary for murder. It was his second trial.

The fall term of the district court commenced at Murray on October 1.

The expenses of the district court at Boise City are estimated at $300 per day.

The Shoshone Journal says there are 200 men now at work on the Bear river canal, which number will be increased to 500 within the next thirty days.

Governor Shoup has commissioned W. C. B. Allen of the Shoshone Journal and Col. J. W. Jones of the Blackfoot Press to represent Idaho at the Deep Harbor convention at Topeka, Kansas.

Work is progressing rapidly on the Washington & Idaho railroad. The track is laid across section 16 to a point on the river about one mile from the proposed depot at Spokane. Construction trains are now running over the line and but a few weeks will elapse before the arrival of the cars at Kellogg.

THE YUKON MINERS.

They Are Afflicted With Scurvy and Threatened With Starvation.

Messrs. John Mooney, William Horning, David Adams and Joseph O'Hara arrived in Port Townsend a few days ago from the Alaska mines. Mr. Mooney was seen by a Morning Leader representative, and gave a thrilling account of that country and the trip home.

Mr. Mooney has been in the Alaskan mines for the past three years, during which time he has seen no society or civilization of any kind except that of rough mining camp life. These mines are situated along the Yukon river, some of them as far as 1600 miles above St. Michaels, which is the nearest town to the mines, and the point from which all supplies, etc., for the miners are shipped.

Yukon mining is exclusively placer, and is confined to the beds of the Yukon river and its tributaries. Notwithstanding the favorable reports which reach this country concerning the mines, we were assured by Mr. Mooney, who is almost a lifelong miner, that they are not what reports indicate. While there is occasionally a man who strikes a good thing, the great majority come out even worse off than they entered the mines. Gold is not found in very large quantities, is hard to get, and there is practically no way of getting it out. The snow season lasts considerably over half the year, there being less than three months of summer. There are about 200 miners in the Yukon district at the present time, all working hard and accomplishing very little. They get their supplies from time to time from the trading posts of the Northwestern Commercial Company. At the present time these miners are in a wretched condition, and those farthest up the river may die of starvation before spring, unless help reaches them before long. During the summer the Commercial Company fitted up a new steamer, the Arctic, which was started up the river with 300 tons of provisions with which to supply the mining camps. When about fifteen miles above St. Michaels, the Arctic was stove in by the rocks and shoals of the river bed, and had to put back for repairs, a large part of the food was damaged, which will cause another delay, and the poor miners may not know of the fate of the Arctic until long after their present supplies are exhausted. Scurvy frequently breaks out among the men, and adds much to their wretchedness. Of the 200 miners along the Yukon river, about sixty arrived last spring, while the others have been there two and three years. The Indians are not very plentiful in this part of Alaska, but are all very friendly to the white men.

Mr. Mooney and a few others came from the mines to St. Michaels, a distance of 1600 miles, in an open boat built by themselves. This beats the record of some of the professional canoeists.

At St. Michaels Mr. Mooney and his three companions took the Bear for Ounalaska, where they boarded the coaling sloop J. D. Peters, Captain Townsend commanding, and came to Port Townsend. The trip from St. Michaels consumed about one month. Mr. Mooney and his party did not know until this fall who was president of the United States.

Joseph O'Hara is one of the few Alaska miners who made a "find." When he arrived at St. Michaels he had $2500, but like so many of his class who are willing to undergo all sorts of privation and spend months or even years at hard labor to accumulate a little fortune, he has an uncontrollable appetite for liquor, and in a few short weeks his money was all gone.

Scurvy is now rife among the Yukon miners, and the pitiless fate of death by starvation that awaits them under Arctic skies should call forth the keenest sympathy of our civilized world.

MONMOUTH NOTES.

MONMOUTH, Or., Oct. 4.

It is expected that work will begin on the street railway in a few days.

There is abundance of room and board for all students who may come.

The foundation of the new bank block was finished this week and the masons are now pushing the brick walls up rapidly. It will be complete in sixty days and will be one of the best blocks in Polk county.

A large number of families have moved into town in the past few weeks and residences are in great demand. Many new buildings are going up and more would be under way if material could be obtained.

The State Normal school has opened with an attendance about one-half larger than ever before. The new building is not yet complete, but will be one of the handsomest and most convenient educational buildings in the state when finished.

Miss Sarah Tuthill, of Portland, late of New York city, who has been elected professor of English and elocution, and Geo. A. Jolliffe, Vancouver, Wn., who has been elected professor of instrumental music, both arrived this week and have begun work.

Taken to Idaho.

HELENA, Oct. 5.—Northern Pacific Roadmaster Fitzpatrick, arrested last spring for stealing coal from the company, was to-day taken to Idaho on a requisition. He is accused of extensive forgeries while roadmaster on a line in that territory.

"THE Sultan is much alarmed by his increasing obesity, and he has just summoned Dr. Schweninger to Constantinople, from Berlin, for whose accommodation a palace on the Bosphorus at Therapia has been prepared, where he is to stay for a week. Dr. Schweninger's treatment has immensely benefitted Prince Bismarck; and the Czar was much the better for it, but he soon gave it up, as he is an inveterate gormandizer, and careful and very plain feeding were as impossible to him as the prescription of one tumbler of weak whisky and Apollinaris at each meal, instead of the magnum of champagne which he usually consumes."—London Truth, September 18, 1889.

Elegant new dining cars, Pullman palace and free family sleeping cars run through on express trains to Denver, Omaha, Council Bluffs and Kansas City via Oregon Short Line. Union ticket office, 81 First street, corner Oak.

Resorvations on any steamship line in the Atlantic service to Europe and England can be secured at Northern Pacific ticket office, No. 121 First street, corner Washington.

Consumption avoided by checking colds with Kidd's Cough Syrup; at all druggists.

What Scott's Emulsion Has Done
Over 25 Pounds Gain in Ten Weeks
Experience of a Prominent Citizen.
THE CALIFORNIA SOCIETY FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE, SAN FRANCISCO, July 7th, 1886.
I took a severe cold upon my chest and lungs and did not give it proper attention; it developed into bronchitis, and in the fall of the same year I was threatened with consumption. Physicians ordered me to a more congenial climate, and I came to San Francisco. Soon after my arrival I commenced taking Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites regularly three times a day. In ten weeks my avoirdupois went from 155 to 180 pounds and over; the cough meantime ceased. C. R. BENNETT.

A FAKE SHOW BY COWBOYS.

About 2500 Pay to See What the Vaqueros Could Not Do.

An Exhibition That Called Forth the Jeers of the Spectators—A Meek Looking Old Barrel Horse Lassoed.

The cowboys' tournament yesterday was the most gigantic fake of the season. Some 2500 people were present, who paid 50 cents for admission and the majority of them 25 cents more for a seat and all who took in the affair came away with the knowledge that they had been taken in also and honors were easy and the sell was such a gigantic one that the victims rather enjoyed it.

The "troupe" consists of half a dozen alleged cowboys and a band of what the spectators generally considered broken-down car horses. It took a long time after they were inside the "corral" for the show to begin. One of the vaqueros wore a buckskin suit, one had a red shirt, a big revolver and a huge pair of black goatskin "chaps" or overalls, another wore a drayman's leather apron, and the others were in plain clothes.

The band of old plugs grazed peacefully in one corner of the grounds and the gang of cowboys gathered in a group at the other end in deep consultation surrounded by an admiring crowd of boys. After a time the gang rode out and saluted the audience by removing their hats and then ambled back in front of the judge's stand, the judge being a short, stout, well fed fellow said to be Mr Doyle. Then one fellow darted from the crowd and rode to the center of the grounds, dismounted, took the saddle off his horse, put it on again as quick as possible and rode back. Another fellow repeated this performance and then the judge announced that one of them had won the prize for "all round horsemanship." This announcement was received with jeers and laughter by the spectators.

Then a fellow rode out into the field and slammed his hat on the ground and tried several times to pick it up as he rode past it but failed. He received great applause. Another fellow on a small horse tried the trick and succeeded in picking up the hat, and that ended that part of the performance.

After another long consultation and a great overhauling of ropes which were to be used as lassoes several bold "buccaros" rode down on the band of old plugs in the corner. These scattered and the wild horsemen raced after them whirling their "ropes" furiously and finally launching them over the fleeing animals. They made a "water haul," and after several similar attempts one of the party succeeded in throwing a noose over the head of a meek looking sorrel which, surprised and disgusted, sailed away dragging his captor along in his wake for a few moments, and then by a sudden turn threw the vaquero and his horse to the ground and tried to drag the horse on top of him, but the rope slipped from the cabera of the saddle and away went the sorrel into the band of horses, while the horse and his rider lay prone till the remainder of the gang dragged them apart and the man retired hors du combat.

At length after several ropes had been slipped over the head of the captured horse he was choked down and a saddle and bridle put on him a crowd of several hundred men and boys gathered around to see the operation performed. Then the horse, which was blindfolded with a "hackamore" or words to that effect, was yanked to his feet, a bold and fearless man mounted him, he bucked a few bucks and subsided into his normal condition of meekness and that part of the exhibition was over.

Then some more vaqueros went racing after the horses, and some lassoed them over the ears and some caught them by the foot, and there was great excitement, and most of the horses caught pulled the ropes away from the men and raced around and scattered the people who had collected in the center of the grounds in fine style. At last an old gray was thrown down and saddled and mounted, and after a few playful attempts at bucking gave it up and looked sick and tired of the whole business.

The spectators who had paid for seats enjoyed seeing those out in the grounds scatter when a new horse was mounted, but they soon saw there was no danger and stood their ground. They were in the way of the cowboys, who attempted to round-up the band of fiery, untamed steeds against them but the bold Webfeet brought their umbrellas down to "resist cavalry," and the horses wheeled away from them as Ney's squadrons did from the British infantry at Waterloo. Then the terror of Rocky gulch, he of the red shirt, big revolver and woolly "chaps," rode through the crowd and a fellow swatted him with an umbrella, and when he stopped to remonstrate, invited him to come down off his cayuse and get thumped, an invitation which was wisely declined.

The spectators had a picnic while this was going on, and began to stream away long before the show was over, congratulating themselves that they got off so cheaply.

It is rumored that the vaquero in the red shirt exhibited his skill with his pistol by shooting holes through a card held up by another bold man, but the crowd refused to believe in the feat and declared that the holes had been punched in the card by the fellow who held it.

This recalls the good old days when the Washingtons used to go out for their annual target shooting and the merchants used to contribute a lot of presents to be shot for. The story used to be that the guard took their ease and before coming home bored the target full of holes and then threw dice for the prizes.

The only thing more that needs to be said about the tournament is that late last evening a cowboy in buckskin was prowling the streets in company with two policemen looking for a man named Doyle who he said had failed to pay him for his share in making such a brilliant success of the tournament.

TWO LONG-WINDED CASES.

The Master in Chancery to Dispose of Some Valuable Property.

The case of the First National bank of Salem against the Capital Flour Mills Company (limited) of Salem, William Stuart et al, which has been in the courts for some time, is apparently now coming to an end as Mr George H Durham United States master in chancery will sell at public auction on the 28th inst, all the real property and water rights of the defendant company. This sale is in satisfaction of a decree of the United States court, rendered on June 17, 1889, and is the closing act in the long litigation. The decree is for $10[illegible] 77 and costs. The defendant corporation was organized by William Reid and others, and succeeded to the water rights of the old Willamette Woolen Mills Company including the Santiam water power. Now that Salem is feeling the quickening pulse of a new life it is probable that some of her capitalists will secure control of this valuable property and utilize it for the benefit of the city and surrounding country.

The celebrated suit of Gee vs. Packwood, which has been in the courts since 187[illegible], or thereabouts, is also to be finally wound up as Mr Durham as United States master in chancery, will sell the El Dorado mining ditch and other property involved at the courthouse door in this city on November 8. To have the court cleared of these cases will be a relief to everybody who has had anything to do with them.

DISASTROUS BRIDAL TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs P. C. Kauffmann Arrive Minus Their Wedding Presents and Wardrobe.

Mr Percival C Kauffmann, vice-president of the Commercial National bank of Vancouver, Wn, was united in marriage to Miss Katherine Barton of Hazleton Pa, at the latter place, September 2[illegible]. They arrived in this city yesterday, and are the guests of Mr D F Sherman.

The happy couple had a very pleasant trip out as far as Idaho, but while passing through the territory the car in which their baggage and costly wedding presents were stored caught on fire and was totally destroyed. Mrs Kauffmann had sixteen dresses when she started but when she stepped off of the train yesterday she was possessed of but her traveling dress. Mr Kauffmann did not have sixteen suits of clothes with him, and he is now blessing his stars that he had not.

The wedding presents were very numerous, and their value could not be expressed with less than four figures. All that is left of them is a lump of bullion which was taken from the ruins of the burned car. Taken all in all, Mr and Mrs Kauffmann made a rather expensive trip across the continent.

LET US HAVE A ROGUE'S GALLERY

The Police Commissioners Should Establish One in This City.

It is high time that the police department had a rogue's gallery established. They have been agitating this at times for years, but without any results. Now that the art of photography has been brought to such perfection that every tourist goes armed with some kind of a snap shot camera and takes photographs of what he sees, it will be in order for the commissioners to furnish the police headquarters with some kind of a camera, in order that photographs of known and suspected criminals can be taken and saved for future reference.

With the cameras now obtainable, no particular skill is required to take photographs and the job is done so easily and quickly that criminals have no time to change their appearance by scowling or distorting their features. The photograph can be taken in an instant and the negative sent to an artist to be developed. The cost of such an outfit would be but trifling and the commissioners will do well to give the scheme a trial.

THEY MAY BUILD AN ADDITION

Some Complaint Made About the Noise Interfering With the Music.

Before the Exposition was opened the fact was shown that the building was not large enough to accommodate all who wished to make exhibits. The immense crowd which thronged the building Saturday night demonstrated that the building instead of being as many said ten years ahead of the city, was not equal to the requirements of the present. Already the directors are considering the question of buying more land and building an addition to the building. This will enable them to place the machinery exhibit away from the music hall, so that the noise of machinery in motion will not interfere with the music.

There has been a little grumbling on this score, but it must be remembered that exhibitors have gone to great expense in fitting up their exhibits, and it would not be fair to them to stop all the machinery every time the band plays. Indeed, it is seldom that there is any need for it, for the band can be heard above all the noise of thousands walking about and every other noise in the building most of the time, and fairly makes the rafters ring.

The machinery can be stopped at any time by Signor Liberati if he desires by simply pressing on the electric button in front of his stand, by which the machinery was started by the little miss on the opening night. If this were done when a piece is to be sung or when the signor is about to play a cornet solo it would be all that could be asked, and the machinery men would not object. With a large addition to the building all necessity for anything of this kind can be avoided.

AT THE BIG PAVILION.

The Sacred Concert Very Largely Attended Yesterday Afternoon.

A Programme of Unusual Excellence Rendered—To-Day's Musical Selections—Extensive Preparations for Wedding Day.

A large and appreciative audience assembled at the Exposition building yesterday afternoon. Either through neglect or oversight, or for some less excusable reason, the printer failed to furnish programmes for the day to the great inconvenience and annoyance of the audience. Signor Liberati apologized for the mischance, but the mere fact of freeing his mind in that manner did not modify his wrath to any appreciable extent.

A few words in passing. The weekday concerts are popularly free for all who are properly admitted, and if in carrying out the purposes of the exhibition there is some unavoidable noise and confusion nobody complains more than is necessary. But on special occasions like the Sunday concerts given by Liberati a decent regard for the comfort of others ought to suggest A Dude A S S and Gassy C. Jumper that their $15 hand-me-down suits would look quite as well on the boulevard as in Floral hall and that people go to hear Liberati and his accomplished artists and not to listen to their inane chat about an unfortunate on the other side.

The programme yesterday was an admirable one. Nehl's "Serenade," Waldteufel's "Dream," the "Stabat Mater," and "La Paloma" of themselves constitute a musical feast worthy of the most critical audience. These were however but a part of the afternoon's programme. Signor Pesci and Madam Romani were heard to great advantage. Liberati's cornet solo with echo effects was a thing to charm all hearts. The rendition of "Stabat Mater" was a veritable triumph for director and orchestra and compelled a recall. The closing number, "Melodies of Many Lands," was equivalent to a panorama of the great round world. There are, however very few elements of what is popularly supposed to be sacred music in it. It was objectionable to a number of the audience however who came not expecting to be regaled with that particular class of music.

PREPARATIONS FOR WEDDING DAY

Wednesday will undoubtedly be the biggest day of the Exposition. On that day two couples will be married in the floral department of the Exposition and special music and decorations are to be provided.

A temporary stage will be built immediately fronting the music stand and on this stage beautifully decorated the ceremony will be performed. In addition to the presents so generously offered by several of the business houses of Portland when Superintendent Kohler was arranging the Exposition programme last spring some of the exhibitors have donated a sufficient number of articles to give the list of presents considerable length. But that the couples may be completely satisfied, the executive committee have decided to duplicate some of the presents so that each bride will have a complete outfit. The bedroom suit donated by the Oregon Furniture Manufacturing Company, and the dining table and chairs by Ira F Powers, and the parlor carpet by Walter Bros. will be given to one of the couples by these houses, and to the other couple will be given by the Association a bedroom suit dining table with chairs and a parlor carpet. After the ceremony, a wedding dinner will be served in the Exposition restaurant. The presents will be on exhibition Wedding day, so all comers may see them.

Dr Powell Reeves Answers a Charge by Producing the Sheepskin Properly Signed and Endorsed

Dr Powell Reeves called at this office yesterday and stated that a certain publication in this city had seen fit to make a direct attack upon him, maligning his personal character and intimating that he had never seen the inside of a medical college. In refutation of this base charge the doctor deliberately pulled out a diploma from the Eclectic school of Cincinnati dated October 1879, and signed by the following faculty: J W Van Sicke, A M M D, professor of anatomy and physiology; S R Nisley, A M M D, professor obstetrics; P T Johnson, A M M D, professor chemistry and toxicology; W M N Martin, A M, M D, professor diseases of women and children; A P Pierce, A M M D, professor pathology and therapeutics; B K Maltby, A M M D, professor theory and practice, and Wilson Nisley, A M M D, professor special lectures on pathology, therapeutics, materia medica, president and dean of the college.

A GERMAN ANNIVERSARY.

Citizens of Philadelphia Will Celebrate the Landing of Pioneers.

PHILADELPHIA Oct. 6—The 206th anniversary of the landing of the German pioneer settlers in Philadelphia was celebrated this afternoon by a large meeting at the call of the German society at Marshall and Spring Garden streets. Addresses were made in German and English. Over 4000 people were present. The musical portion of the programme was rendered by a large orchestra under the direction of Paul Scutz and a chorus of 200 male and 150 female voices representing principal musical societies of the city.

SIMILAR CELEBRATION AT ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS Oct 6—German day was observed here to-day with a will and the landing of the pioneers of German immigration which took place Oct 6 1683 was honored by a most harmonious union of all citizens of German descent, regardless of religious creed or political faith. It is estimated that 30 000 men were in the procession this afternoon. Many banners bore the inscription, "True to America, Proud of Germany." A monster meeting assembled in the music hall of the exposition building to-night where patriotic speeches were made and a musical programme rendered by the German singing societies of the city.

OPENING OF THE SCHOOLS.

Superintendent Wetzell Reports a Large Attendance in the Country.

The Increase Is Due in a Measure to the Law Requiring the Expenditure of the Amount Apportioned.

County School Superintendent Wetzell is giving to the public school interests of the county his first and best efforts and during the past year has done a great deal in their advancement. Much success has attended his work. He expects to do far more for the schools during the coming year, and will not be satisfied until the schools of the county rank with the best.

Superintendent Wetzell reports that the country schools are opening for the winter under the most favorable circumstances. The outlook for the year is very encouraging. The attendance throughout the county is greatly in excess of that at the opening last year. Both teachers and pupils are taking hold of the work with commendable earnestness. The law requiring the school directors to expend the entire school fund during the year for which it was apportioned has caused an increase in salaries and the employment of more capable teachers. School districts are not allowed to accumulate money now as in years gone by. The entire school fund must be exhausted when the clerk files his annual report with the superintendent. The object of this law is to compel the directors to continue school just as long as the money lasts.

The local teachers and parents meeting conducted throughout the county last winter by the superintendent created a strong sentiment in favor of better schools. Teachers, school officers and parents have been aroused to the importance of their schools and all have been impressed with the responsibility resting upon them and that the success and efficiency of their schools depends upon individual interest and united effort. The superintendent is making arrangements for resuming these meetings soon. Circulars announcing the time and place of holding each meeting will be issued in a few days.

During the last two weeks the superintendent has visited the schools in the eastern part of the county and a few in the vicinity of the city. No. 30 on the Columbia river has succeeded at last in finding a teacher. Mrs. M. J. Detrick will begin teaching in this district to-day.

Professor M H Savage has just closed a very successful two months' term in No. 9. He closed school Friday the 27th of September. Mr Savage has been employed to teach school in No. 6 which is west of the city. He began last Monday.

Mr Leonard Vincent closed on last Friday a successful term of school in district No. 41 east of the Sandy river. The directors of this district are contemplating building a new school house, which is much needed.

Miss Anna Heslin has the honor of teaching the first term of school in the new school house in No. 3, which lies immediately west of No 41. Miss Heslin is a good teacher and the school is very prosperous.

The school in No. 4, in the southeastern part of the county, is now in charge of Mrs Jennie Gardner. This lady is a student and aims to keep abreast of the times. The building is of logs but is the best the district can afford at present. The directors and the citizens are aware of their needs in this direction and steps will be taken soon to provide more comfortable quarters.

In the Lents district No. 26 the lower school is taught by Miss Lizzie [illegible] and the upper school by Miss Dollie Hurlburt. Both schools are growing in efficiency.

The educational interests of No. 70 joint with Clackamas county are in charge of Mr C J Stupp lately from the East. The school is very large. The citizens speak encouragingly of their teacher.

Miss Delia Bryant is teaching in No 24—Midway. Miss Bryant is a good teacher and is having deserved success. At the time of the superintendent's visit the lady was making a dissection of a cow's eye, to explain to her pupils the mechanism of the eye and how sight is produced. Professor Wetzell says this is the first work of this character he has witnessed in the country outside of the city schools. Why not have more of it? he asks. It is thoroughly practical, and is calculated to wake up intellects. Children are always interested in such things. By such exhibitions the dullest may be stimulated to greater mental activity.

The schools of district No. 4 joint with Clackamas, are in charge of Professor S W Holmes who is assisted by Miss Morgan and Mrs Stark. Mr Holmes had charge of the Sellwood schools last year, and did his work so well that the directors re-engaged him at $90 per month—an increase of $15 per month over last year's salary. This increase came to Mr Holmes unsolicited hence he considers it a sign of appreciation.
